IN THIS ISSUE

LIVING ON THE East Coast, it was easy to dismiss the television networks' early election projections as irresponsible journalism done in the name of the ratings war. But now that I'm living in California, I see just how dangerous it is for the national pundits to write off elections before the polls even close here.

The scenario is easy to picture. You're heading home after a rough day at work, either sitting in traffic or packed like a sardine on Muni. You're already dreading the line at the voting booth when you hear it's all over. The great know-all, seer-alls on the anchor desk declare a winner, tell you there's nothing left but the concession speeches.

So why should you bother voting? Because of all of the things that the great media seers don't know.

They don't know, for instance, that you're a single mother struggling to keep a roof over your children's heads and that our governor wants to cut state assistance.

They don't know that you are an AIDS patient trapped in a dysfunctional health-care network that can make you wait for days for service and that the city is frighteningly close to electing a Board of Supervisors that would put special business interests ahead of basic social services.

They don't know that you are a senior citizen trying to get by on a fixed income, but your rent keeps going up faster than the inflation rate.

They don't know that your children are attending overcrowded, run-down schools and trying to learn from textbooks that are older than they are. Meanwhile, the school board has been so deeply split by petty personal squabbles that it is completely incapable of action.

They don't know that the state could actually end up sending someone like Bruce Herschensohn to the Senate, where his only ideological equal is Jesse Helms.

I know every election feels like "the big one." But this one really is. We are closer that we have been in 20 years to effecting sweeping change both in Washington and at home. But we aren't there yet, and every vote is critical.

George Bush really could win. Bruce Herschensohn really could be having lunch with Helms at Dominique's this time next year. San Francisco and California's social progress could be set back 30 years.

Think about it. And vote.

VOTE NO ON B

I was shocked to see that the Bay Guardian endorses SF Proposition B, the $158 million jail expansion bond, on November's ballot.

In your endorsement you noted that "violent felons and people with felony records make up two-thirds of the current [jail] population." However, 77 percent of the jail's population are pretrial inmates, accused but not convicted of felonies. Seventy percent of those arrested on felonies in San Francisco have their cases reduced to misdemeanors or dismissed. Why? Because a barroom brawl in the Marina is typically "counseled and dismissed" by the police, or at worst charged as a misdemeanor. In the Western Addition, participants in barroom brawls are charged with felony assault and have to wait for weeks or months until their cases are dismissed or reduced.

You also failed to note that African American men are incarcerated in San Francisco at 16 times the rate of white men, and that San Francisco's incarceration rate for African American men is twice the national average.

It surprised us that with backing from such diverse groups as the Harvey Milk Club, the Black Leadership Forum, and the National Organization for Women, we did not rate even a phone call or a meeting prior to this endorsement, despite the numerous attempts we made to contact the Bay Guardian. I still urge your readers to cast an emphatic no vote on Proposition B.

PROGRESSIVE DISCONTENT

You guys are too much. You finally see the light on the fallen cop whom I seem to remember you endorsed for mayor, and you expose Jack Davis while not mentioning it was your constant assault on former Mayor Agnos that helped lead to Davis' greatest coup: the victory of Frank Jordan. If "progressives" like the Bay Guardian, Angela Alioto, and Harry Britt could have had the wisdom and political principle to get over not being invited to the "right" cocktail parties we wouldn't have a pawn of the Chamber of Commerce et al. as mayor.

WHERE THE COPS AREN'T

As a resident of the neighborhood near the Army projects/Bernal dwellings, I observed the incidents that occurred last Wednesday, Oct. 12, including the widely reported truck-driver beating. It has not been reported that, a few hours earlier, another large group of people forced two women out of their car and then set the vehicle on fire. Police response to the earlier incident was much slower, and fewer officers arrived.

These are not isolated events. For several months, hardly a night has passed without gunfire. Several nights of the week, cars are driven up and down the parking lot of the Army projects/Bernal dwellings, screeching and squealing their tires and banging into each other, sometimes for as long as an hour and a half. Where are the police?

I live in this neighborhood with my wife and two small children. I don't believe an increased police presence will solve the problems here, but feel that the current situation is indicative of the degree of neglect and lack of commitment city government has to this neighborhood. I'm sorry it took the beating of an out-of-town truck driver to call attention to these problems.

ELECTING INDEPENDENT TV

I was glad to see your article ["Mail-ing Mixup Muddies KQED Board Election," 10/14/92] urging KQED members to elect reform-oriented "New Priorities" candidates to the station's board of directors. However, I was surprised that neither the Bay Guardian nor the New Priorities slate endorsed Peter Adair.

Adair, the producer of Word Is Out and Absolutely Positive, is at least as qualified for board membership as any other candidate. I urge KQED members to consider giving him a vote.

Also, you spelled candidate Joel Forte's [sic] name differently from the way Joel Fort and the ballot do.

TALKIN' ABOUT COMIN' OUT

I could think of so many better questions to ask Tracy Chapman than what she thinks of other artists "coming out" ["This Is Tracy Chapman's Mind," 9/23/92]. For example:

Do you think the next administration (hopefully Clinton) will significantly change the conditions of the people you sing about? Are you doing any political work or benefits? Who inspired you when you were growing up? What kind of music did you listen to? Who influences you now, both musically and otherwise? What books are you reading? And if you absolutely must: Are you seeing anyone now? Would you like to talk about their influence on your music?

Supervisors scrutinize PG&E contracts

THE CITY'S CONTRACTS with Pacific Gas and Electric Co., which have drained $18 million from City Hall since 1988, were challenged Oct. 21 by the city's budget analyst and the three members of the Board of Supervisors Finance Committee.

According to Bay Guardian analyses of a report by Budget Analyst Harvey Rose to the Finance Committee (see On Guard, 10/21/92), the contracts require the city to pay PG&E a severe "capacity reserve charge" of $373,750 a month.

At the meeting, Anson Moran, general manager of Hetch Hetchy, told the supervisors for the first time that some aspects of the contracts are up for renegotiation in December. He later told the Bay Guardian it's the capacity-reserve charge that can be renegotiated.

The supervisors ordered Moran and City Attorney Tom Berliner to investigate the city's bargaining leverage, alternatives to PG&E's expensive supplemental power, and the possibility of dropping the expensive capacity charge.

"I'm hearing everybody had leverage. PG&E had leverage. MID/TID had leverage. Everyone seems to have leverage," said Supervisor Jim Gonzalez. "When does the city have leverage?"

Bruce Brugmann, editor and publisher of the Bay Guardian and a longtime advocate of municipalizing PG&E electric services, criticized Hetch Hetchy's Moran and City Attorney Berliner for "selling out the city" with the 1988 contracts. He said a feasibility study on municipalization would give the city immediate leverage on every front: in negotiating the contracts, or better, breaking the contracts; in getting decent rates for residents; and in stopping PG&E from using the city as a "multimillion-dollar cash cow."

Moran and Berliner, who were part of the original negotiating team for the city, told the committee that their hands had been tied. They said threats from then-U.S. Rep. Tony Coelho, who represented Turlock and Modesto, forced them to grant what Supervisors Terence Hallinan and Gonzalez referred to at the meeting as "a sweetheart deal." But in the final days of contract negotiations, it was clear that then-Mayor Dianne Feinstein and the City Attorney's Office were essentially defending PG&E's demands.

"Because we never put things out for bid, we don't know if there was a better deal out there," said Moran. "We weren't convinced that there weren't better deals out there," said Kenny Bruce of the Budget Analyst's Office, who had recommended that the city reject the contracts. San Jose, for example, he said, was willing to buy power without a capacity-reserve charge.

For the last three months, Hetch

Hetchy has been buying cheap supplemental power from a consortium of public and private power suppliers called Western Systems Power Pool (WSPP). In the past, Moran has been unwilling to renegotiate the charge because he says he's not sure there's another supplier that could ensure delivery of power.

"Between now and December, will I have an option in my pocket?" asked Moran. "I think not."

But Supervisor Carole Migden ordered Moran to supply the Budget Analyst's Office with a list of alternatives.

"If we're going to go into negotiation in December," said Gonzalez, "we're obligated to the taxpayers to have some leverage."

"You want leverage," said Brugmann, "just say two words to PG&E: feasibility study."

P.S. No reporters from the San Francisco Examiner and Chronicle attended the meeting, which was held at the same time as a mayoral press conference on the subject of a new Giants stadium. In the pressroom, Chronicle reporter April Lynch and Examiner reporter Jane Ganahl told us they had more important things to cover and suggested we call their editors to find out why the papers weren't covering the story. At the Examiner, Executive Editor Phil Bronstein told us that "we're looking into the issue and if we find there's a story, we'll cover it." At the Chronicle, assignment editor John Diaz referred us to higher editors. We left the question for William German, Chronicle editor, but he hadn't returned our call by press time.

The following day Ganahl had an Examiner byline on "Keeping SF Restaurants Clean."

Merchants plan vouchers for panhandlers

AS SAN FRANCISCANS prepare to vote next week on a measure to crack down on "aggressive panhandling," a group of Castro/Market merchants and residents is getting ready to launch a more positive response to panhandlers in their neighborhood. Before Thanksgiving the group plans to be operating a program through which people can purchase vouchers to give to panhandlers instead of change.

These vouchers will be redeemable for food, transportation, laundry, and other services, but may not be used for alcohol or tobacco. The project is called "Castro/Market Cares," modeled after the "Berkeley Cares" program implemented a year ago.

Barry Hermanson, owner of Hermanson's Employment Services on 14th Street and secretary of Merchants of Upper Market, told the Bay Guardian he got the idea of starting "Castro/Market Cares" when he heard about the Berkeley program. "Yes, it can be bad for business if a person's passed out on your doorstep," he said. "But we also wanted to show that we're not all Scrooges."

The initial response has been good, Hermanson said. Many merchants have agreed to sell the vouchers. Others, like the Dolores Street Community Center, have volunteered to help sponsor promotional costs.

Brian Boyd, of the San Francisco Homeless Task Force, formerly homeless himself, told the Bay Guardian he was skeptical about how much such a program would help. Handouts alone will not be enough to make the project work, he said. "There is plenty of food dumped every day in San Francisco. Jobs are what homeless people need."

But according to Michael Daniels, founding member of "Berkeley Cares" and project director for the Jobs for the Homeless Consortium, the voucher program is not designed to be a solution to homelessness. The idea is to make an effort to improve conditions for needy people. The program has improved relations between street people and other Berkeley residents, Daniels said. "There are friendlier relations on the streets.... We've seen a reduction of aggressive panhandling."

For more information about "Castro/Market Cares," call (415) 979-8175.

More than 5,000 runners and walkers raised some $200,000 for the Susan G. Komen Breast Cancer Foundation by participating in Race for the Cure, held last Sunday in Golden Gate Park.

Is SFPD open to community input?

IF THE SAN FRANCISCO Police Department doesn't give community groups a major role in choosing a new police chief, will it really commit itself to a community-based style of policing?

Some activists were wondering just that after Mayor Frank Jordan announced he would soon pick a "short list" of candidates, just a week after holding a meeting with community groups to discuss police-chief selection.

Participants emerged from the Oct. 16 meeting sounding optimistic that the mayor understood the need for improved, sustained community input in the selection of the new chief.

"I think his original intent was that this one meeting would be the community input," said Diane Chin of the SF Lawyers Committee on Urban Affairs. "But everyone repeated that there was no way that one meeting would be sufficient." Con Johnson, president of the black police group Officers for Justice, said: "I think the mayor gave serious thought to taking a different approach, rather than just listening to his selection committee."

At the meeting, according to Gerard Koskovich of Bad Cop/No Donut, "people said, 'Your 10-day search was a joke.'"

"If there was going to be a serious commitment [to opening up the process], the application period would have been more than 10 days," said John Crew of the ACLU's Police Practices Project. "They told us that they used their contacts to get the word out. This is exactly the old-boy network which has been so roundly criticized."

Crew said he was concerned about the selection process because it seems "completely inconsistent with the ideas of community policing."

Panel to study state Indian tribes

AFTER INSISTING that it be watered down drastically from its original form, President Bush on Oct. 14 signed the Advisory Council on California Indian Policy Act of 1992.

The bill was first introduced in 1990 by U.S. Rep. George Miller (D-Richmond), as the California Tribal Status Act. It called for far-reaching reforms of California Indian policy, granting official federal recognition to some tribes and restoring tribal status to others whose status has been "terminated." (See "Taking It Back," 10/7/92.)

Without official recognition, tribes cannot protect their sovereignty and gain access to federal funding and service. The 1990 bill also established and funded a $5 million federal commission to study policies and programs affecting California Indians.

By the time the bill reached Bush's desk it had undergone so many revisions in Congress that its name was changed to reflect them, said Daniel Weiss, spokesperson for the House Interior and Insular Affairs Committee.

All provisions for recognizing specific tribes were removed, and the commission budget was reduced to $700,000, Weiss said. He said the commission, named the Advisory Council on California Indian Policy, will be composed of 14 voting delegates from both federally recognized and unacknowledged California tribes, and two non-voting members from the Bureau of Indian Affairs (BIA) and the Indian Health Service. The group will research policies affecting California Indians and study Indian census data.

Both Weiss and Allogan Slagle, Federal Acknowledgement Project director for the Association on Indian Affairs, said the revisions were made to please the Bush administration. "The administration swore up and down that they'd veto it, [and now] they've come very close to eviscerating it," said Slagle.

Bush, in an Oct. 15 press release, said he opposed the establishment of a tribal recognition process for California Indians because "in 1978 the Department of the Interior established the Federal Acknowledgement Process to ensure that all petitions for recognition as a federally recognized tribe would be evaluated in an objective and uniform manner.... I do not ... support the establishment of separate recognition procedures."

Slagle pointed out that John Shappard, the author of the Federal Acknowledgement Process, now admits it doesn't work. Its regulations are so restrictive, Slagle said, that even the Navajo would be denied tribal status if they were to apply for it today.

While the new legislation, as it stands, does nothing to reform the tribal-recognition process, said Slagle, it signals a Congress more committed to Indian rights. He said he agreed with the statement written by Sen. Daniel Inouye (D-Hawaii), chair of the Select Committee on Indian Affairs, that "the passage of HR 2144 [the new law] marks an important first step."

MARIA L. DE LAO

Mission District residents protest curfew

AT A SPECIAL MEETING of the Mayor's Task Force on the Mission (MTFM) Oct. 26, frustrated community residents denounced existing curfew laws as useless at dealing with the problem of street gangs, and blasted city officials for ignoring the problems of the Latino community in the Mission.

"The task force has not yet come to an official position on the curfew," said Frank Lopez, MTFM co-chair, who moderated a discussion by a panel of "experts" that included police, community, and civil-rights-group representatives. The public meeting is one of several MTFM will hold before it makes its recommendation to Mayor Frank Jordan on whether to keep or repeal the existing curfew, which prohibits children under 14 from being out between midnight and 5 a.m.

During the testimony, it became clear that few on the panel, including the police officers, felt that a curfew, or any form of increased law enforcement, was the answer to the problems that plague that community.

"Never in my life have I seen that a curfew solved anything," said Christina Gutierrez, chair of MTFM's Youth Education and Recreation Committee. Gutierrez said she had emigrated from a country with unending military curfews. "Is a curfew going to bring employment for our people, decent housing and recreation to our children?" she asked.

Police Sgt. Steve Johnson

ON GUARD

agreed the curfew was not the answer but said it is a useful tool. "It helps protect children from themselves," said his partner, Officer Mario Delgadillo of the San Francisco Gang Task Force. "It puts them somewhere where they don't hurt themselves or others."

"We can give you the order, police officer, to lock up our kids," said Mitch Salazar, executive director of Real Alternatives Program. "But that is a real Band-Aid approach to our problems. And I would hope there is more vision in this room to deal with this problem."

"We oppose the notion of curfew laws," said Al Schlosser, a lawyer with the American Civil Liberties Union. "There are laws in the books that allow police to pick up kids involved in criminal activity. [A curfew] is going to be selective enforcement. It's not going to be enforced in Pacific Heights, it's going to be enforced on minority kids in the Mission."

MTFM vice chair Hilda Bernstein was one of a few speakers to demand that Jordan make law enforcement in the Mission a higher priority. In a prepared statement, she noted: "During any given 24 hours, there are typically only 51 officers. Unless one is in the process of being murdered, raped or otherwise assaulted, the crime is 'low-priority' and police response is unlikely."

In one of the most emotional moments of the evening, Carmen Olivares, a Mission resident and member of Padres Unidos Contra la Violencia [Parents United Against Violence], went up to the microphone, turned her back to the panel, and spoke to the audience.

Many mothers and fathers in the Mission work multiple jobs, Olivares pointed out. They can't afford care for their kids while they're at work, but they pay taxes — "and the best [the city] can do is a curfew. I mean, our jails are already filled with our people."

Election Night parties

BREAKING WITH THE traditional Election Night party, the Ad Hoc Election Celebration Committee will host "San Francisco's biggest outdoor election celebration" in Dolores Park at Mission and 18th streets, from 6 to 9 p.m., to "celebrate the election of President Bill Clinton and Vice President Al Gore!" KFOG political commentator Scoop Nisker will report on election returns. Events will include a comedy re-enactment of Clinton's trip to Moscow; a contest to impersonate Sinead O'Connor tearing a photo of George Bush in half; an inhale-a-thon; and a wake for the far-right wing of the Republican Party. The committee writes: "Come dressed as your favorite election character. Enjoy free music, food, and dancing in the warm winds of change."

The Daughtergate complex

BY TIM REDMOND

IN HIS DEFINITIVE Kennedy conspiracy book, On the Trail of the Assassins, the late Jim Garrison described a long series of strange attempts by strange people to set him up for a political fall and discredit his efforts to bring the president's true killers to justice.

My favorite was the airport-bathroom gambit, a complex plot hatched over many months across several states with a startling cast of characters. It all hinged on Garrison's unusual habit of passing the time between connecting airline flights locked in a stall in the nearest men's room, sitting fully clothed on the toilet seat and reading a good book. It was peaceful and quiet in there, he said.

But shortly after Garrison got into the Kennedy case, somebody from the shadowy world of the CIA, the anti-Castro Cubans, Lyndon Johnson, and the mob discovered Garrison's private inclination, and hatched a plan to trap him in a sex-crime sting.

A lot of people still don't believe Garrison's story, any more than they believe that the director of the New Orleans Trade Mart, a respected businessman named Clay Shaw, was really the mastermind of what Garrison called a paramilitary coup that took place in Dallas in 1963.

And if you're one of those people, you probably laughed when Ross Perot went on 60 Minutes Sunday night and started babbling about wiretaps on his office phones, electronic interference with his stock transactions, and a high-tech plot to send embarrassing, digitally altered photos of his daughter to the newspapers just before her wedding day.

DEEP DOO DOO

Garrison, a former criminal defense lawyer who was investigating the Kennedy conspiracy as the New Orleans district attorney, said he first became suspicious of a plot against him when he started getting calls at his unlisted home phone from a law client he had represented many years earlier on some sort of lewd behavior charge. The man would ramble incoherently for a few minutes, Garrison wrote, then randomly hang up.

It turned out that the guy had moved to another state and was living in a city where a flight Garrison was taking in several weeks would be making a short layover. And when the D.A. sat down in his peaceful stall, the man suddenly showed up, yanked open the door and began making sexual advances. Instantly, local authorities burst onto the scene with cameras, and charged Garrison with attempting to commit public sodomy.

Garrison insisted he had no idea what his old client was doing in the bathroom, but the cops were able to get Garrison's home phone records — and bingo: Several late-night calls turned up connecting Garrison to the same man, just a few weeks before the fateful trip.

Garrison eventually beat the rap, but (of course) the scandal hit just as he was up for re-election, and (of course) it cost him his job. It also, of course, ended the prosecution of the Kennedy assassins. Amazing.

Let's face it: Perot, who just flushed his political career down the airport toilet, and Garrison, who died last week, were both half a bubble off plumb. But they also played in some high and wild games, where nothing is quite what it seems and everyone is out to get you, maybe for something you don't even know you did.

I can't explain what that guy was doing in Garrison's bathroom stall, and I don't know whether somebody from the Bush campaign was going to give the National Enquirer photos of lesbian sex scenes involving Ross Perot's darling daughter. I must admit, it all seems a bit peculiar.

But I think what Perot and Garrison were trying to tell us is that shit like this really happens sometimes. And once you get that part straight, the details don't matter much.

THE CRACKPOT

Since I love this sort of thing, I can't help pointing out a crucial element of the Daughtergate conspiracy that hasn't yet come to light. The whole thing was so lame-brained and wacky that it's hard to believe anyone would actually carry it out, but that's the real beauty of the thing: The plot didn't actually have to exist to work. Ross Perot just had to believe it.

Let's assume one of Perot's opponents (maybe the Clinton or Bush campaign, maybe someone else) was behind the sordid scheme, and the goal was to knock Perot out of the race. Anyone serious enough to see through the gambit would realize that the initial threat might fail: Perot is a tough character and he doesn't scare easily. For all anyone knew, he might have told his daughter to buck up, circled the wagons around the old homestead, and let the character assassins do their worst.

But he'd never be able to keep the story to himself. At some point, if Perot was convinced a conspiracy was afoot, he would have to start talking about it — and as soon as he did, the whole world would decide he was a crackpot. At that point, it wouldn't matter whether he stayed in the race or not; nobody would take him seriously anymore.

The more bizarre the alleged plot, the easier it would be to ridicule Perot's claims, and the better the whole thing would work. Could the Bush campaign have devised that strategy? Of course. So could the Clinton campaign. So could quite a few others who might want to monkey with the outcome of the election. So could a small army of weirdos who like to make random trouble, for reasons none of us will ever truly understand.

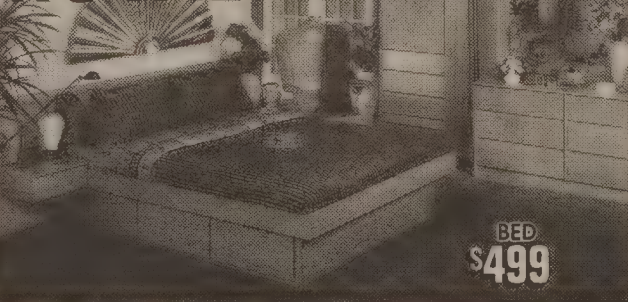

Perot was a perfect mark who would fall for the sting in a second. That's why no true paranoid is ever really safe in this world.

In the end, though, the Perot perplex is largely a sideshow. The real conspiracy is happening in the back rooms where network pollsters and political consultants are figuring out how to manipulate the popular vote and rig the Electoral College. There's only one way to survive, and that's to fight back.

Lie to the exit pollsters. Vote early and often — this week if you can, before all the last-minute propaganda hits. (Anyone can stop by the Registrar's Office during working hours and fill out a ballot.) In the meantime, throw out all your political mail immediately, without reading a word of it.

Because you know they're going to get you, if they can. ●

Sicily

An Island For All Seasons

An island to visit, to savor, to enjoy, Sicily has spectacular scenery and a special charm, not to mention classical remains that are as awe-inspiring as anything to be seen in Greece or Rome. And the visitor can relax in Sicily, where everyone — treats tourists with respect. On the largest island in the Mediterranean, where the countless upstanding people of Sicily will go out of their way to show visitors just how helpful and hospitable they can be.

Among the pleasures of the island are a climate that makes travel pleasant even in the winter months, when other parts of Italy and Europe are shivering with cold. Sunbathing on Palermo's beaches is a happy way to celebrate New Year's Day, and the glory of a valley full of almond trees in bloom makes February a heady sight in Agrigento. Even in the summer, the heights of Taormina, Mount Etna, Enna and Erice offer cool breezes and striking panoramas. In the spring the island is at its greenest, with wildflowers in full bloom and jasmine perfuming the air. In the fall the air is slightly effervescent; it is just cool enough to make walking pleasant, but the sun can still gently toast you to a golden tan.

The island's capital, Palermo, is a fascinating blend of old and new, proud and flamboyant; it vaunts a wealth of artistic and architectural treasures, as well as some very smart modern shopping streets and the most vivacious street market in Italy, the Vucciria. In Monreale, a small town in the hills above Palermo, shimmering gold mosaics sheathe the walls of a massive Norman cathedral. At the foot of a rocky rampart on the island's scenic north coast, the medieval cathedral of Cefalu has mosaics to rival those of Monreale. In the sea off the little port of Milazzo, which is guarded by a picturesque castle, the seven Aeolian islands are a cluster of volcanoes — some still active — that are exclusive vacation retreats, known for their rugged rock formations, crystal-clear waters and dramatic beauty.

The largest volcano in Europe, Mount Etna looms over verdant orchards and vineyards between Catania and the modern port city of Messina. The flowered terraces of charming Taormina afford impressive views of this majestic, smoke-spewing mountain. Taormina is a delightful medieval town perched high above the coast; it is Sicily's most fashionable resort, and it is a lively place all year round. At the foot of Mount Etna's vast and fertile lower slopes, the city of Catania is rich in graceful Baroque palaces and churches built in dark lava stone. Inland, on the plain of Catania, acres and acres of lush citrus groves stretch, bright with the fruit of orange and lemon trees and redolent of their blossoms.

The inland areas of the northeast and north-central Sicily are blanketed with mountains, dotted here and there with formidable castles, crumbling fortifications and picturesque hill towns. Roughly at the center of the island are the noble old cities of Enna and Caltanissetta, where the atmosphere of the Sicilian heartland is at its most authentic. One of the stellar attractions of the town is the ancient Roman villa of Casale, outside the town of Piazza Armerina, where beautiful mosaic pavements are remarkably well preserved. Not far away is the ceramic producing center of Caltagirone; here visitors can find bright ceramic wares in sunny Sicilian colors.

On the coastal plain in southeast Sicily, Syracuse was once the most powerful Greek city in the Mediterranean. It has an appealing mixture of Greek ruins, including a splendid amphitheater, and gracious palaces and churches in Baroque style. There are plenty of prehistoric and classical sites in this part of Sicily; their somewhat stark, rock-cut contours finds a visually delightful contrast in an engagingly Baroque trio of towns: Ragusa, Noto and Modica.

But the most impressive of all the classical remains in Sicily are the Greek temples of Agrigento, where several majestic Doric temples stand among groves of olive and almond trees. The sight of their huge stone columns, golden in the sunlight and ghostly pale at night, is a thrilling one.

The westernmost tip of Sicily offers such diverse sights as the evocative ruins of the Greek city of Selinunte, or the fishing port of Mazara del Vallo, where the plump grapes and capers grown on the island of Pantelleria are shipped ashore, or the huge wooden casks in Marsala's wine cellars, where the sweet and heady local wine is aged before export.

Farther north along Sicily's western coast, windmills appear on the horizon in Trapani, where they pump sea water in and out of the salt pans on the shore. High above Trapani is the lovely little medieval town of Erice, remote and idyllic. And inland stands another of Sicily's classical marvels — the solitary Greek temple of Segesta, solemn and serene on its mountain site.

Throughout the island, the warm hospitality and traditional graciousness of the Sicilian people make the visitor welcome. The unaffected friendliness of the Sicilians and their untroubled acceptance of visitors can be as memorable as the weighty cultural heritage of their island. The pleasure to be found in both is great indeed.

DEAR DEMOCRATS AND FELLOW LIBERALS:

My name is Marc Wolin. I'm 29 years old. Maybe you met me while I campaigned at one of the street fairs or at festivals in Golden Gate Park. So far I've personally met more than 40,000 people in San Francisco this year.

The religious right in California led by Pat Robertson and Pat Buchanan has only a bare majority of seats on the statewide GOP central committee — the chief policy making body of the California Republican party. GOP by-laws allot all party nominees additional appointments to seats on the committee if the nominees garner specific percentages of votes above Republican registration in their districts on election day, whether or not they actually get elected.

If you share my deep concerns about ensuring a serious blow is struck against the foes of choice, privacy, freedom and civil liberties statewide in California, then on November 3rd I really do need your vote — and every vote you can help get for me — in my race for a seat in Congress.

Naturally I'd like to be elected to Congress. But never have I had illusions about miracles happening this year for underfinanced GOP challengers like me in districts where only 17 percent of registered voters are Republicans.

You and I win whether I'm elected with all of our votes for me when the greater voter percentages I garner enable me to appoint more liberals like me to the GOP state central committee. Your votes can really help me block the religious right statewide.

Raised by a single woman as a latch-key child in an inner city, I will always continue to strongly oppose all religious and moral minorities who wish to impose their insipid vision upon the majority. It is an imposition that is anathema to all of us who truly believe that all-American fundamental creed of separating church from state. It is a serious threat to all of us who strongly believe that protection under the law cannot be truly equal until it is extended and made secure for all people regardless of race, creed, color, gender, economic status, disability, beauty and sexual orientation.

Maybe we can even make a miracle happen here, too.

Retired City Employees who retired on Fixed Pensions during the last 25 years or more are falling further behind the real cost-of-living.

*"Proposition "F" would provide a limited cost-of-living increase for a group of "Miscellaneous" employees whose retirement allowances are inadequate in an inflated economy.

*The minimum monthly increase would be $3 for one year of retirement to $75 maximum for those retired 25 years or more. [There are ONLY 1882 persons retired over 20 years and 1477 (79%) are over 80 years of age.]

*The terms of "F" apply to those presently retired, thus the cost to the Retirement System will decrease each year and end with the last survivor. (Those newly retired under Proposition A are not included.)

A clear choice

The Clinton-Gore domestic strategy offers cities a fighting chance

THE WAY THE POLITICAL strategists in Washington and Little Rock see it, the 1992 presidential campaign is mostly about suburbs. The way we see it, the 1992 presidential election is mostly about cities. The suburbs are where the growth is: In the 1980s, they passed big cities and small towns and took over the top position on the American demographic charts. More than a third of the country now lives in the suburbs.

The suburbs are where people with even a modest amount of money fled in the 1980s, as small farms collapsed, little towns disappeared, and life in the big cities turned mean and ugly. It's no surprise that the suburbs were the heartland of the Reagan revolution: Suburban voters — mostly white, mostly earning a decent wage — weren't paying taxes to support the cities anymore.

The policies of the past 12 years have shifted the burden of providing services away from Washington and back to the states. In California, the Deukmejian and Wilson administrations have shifted that burden again, passing it on to local governments. That means the residents of the county of Marin, or the city of Hillsborough, can decide to pay for good schools, safe parks, and clean streets, and leave the less-fortunate residents of Oakland and San Francisco and San Jose and East Palo Alto to fend for themselves (see "The Scary Street," Page 35).

One of the big disappointments of the Clinton-Gore campaign is that the two Democrats who came of age in the days of the civil rights movement haven't talked more about cities. They've done what their political advisers told them they had to do: They've played to the suburbs, where the money and votes are.

But the Clinton-Gore team represents a domestic strategy that we're convinced will give the great, dying cities of America a fighting chance to revive. That's the main reason we're not at all reluctant to endorse Bill Clinton for president.

NOT MR. GOODBAR

Clinton is hardly a progressive reformer. He's a moderate Democrat, an ambitious politician who's learned the art of compromise (some would say the art of selling out) over the course of 12 years as governor of a conservative Southern state.

In January 1992, the national League of Conservation Voters ranked Clinton last among the Democratic presidential candidates on environmental issues. Although the AFL-CIO endorsed him, organized labor has been nervous about his decidedly mixed record on workplace safety in Arkansas, his strong support for the state's "right-to-work" law, and his conditional support for the North American Free Trade Agreement. Abortion-rights advocates have criticized his support for Arkansas' parental-notification law and his opposition to state funding for abortions for low-income women.

His consistent, out-front advocacy for the death penalty has disturbed progressive supporters, many of whom were shocked by his decision last spring to suspend campaigning and return to Arkansas for an execution.

His recent pronouncements about wiping out the deficit through "economic growth" sounded disturbingly similar to the old Reagan line about rising tides and boats, and the ugly welfare-bashing sentiment behind his latest appeal to "personal responsibility" isn't even subtle.

For a lot of progressives, the best thing you can say about Bill Clinton is that he's not George Bush. We have a bit more hope. Over the past few months, we've almost become born-again Clinton optimists: For all his obvious problems, the guy has a lot to offer.

Clinton is a thinker, a bright person who gets tremendous satisfaction from finding creative approaches to difficult policy problems. Consider his rejection of the idea that there's a tradeoff between jobs and the environment, for example. Like so many of his policy ideas (and unlike so much of the Bush-Quayle platform), it has a discernible connection to reality. It's based on facts.

That doesn't mean Clinton will come up with all the right answers on major environmental issues. But it means at least he's asking a few of the right questions — very different from recent presidents.

And while he doesn't say much about cities, his major platform proposals — public-works projects, job training, economic-development banks, education, health-care reform, and AIDS research and prevention — are central elements of any serious plan to rebuild the nation's cities.

HELP FROM HIS FRIENDS

Nobody runs the United States alone (although a few presidents have tried). Much of an administration's overall policy is based on the advice of a few key people who make up the presidential brain-trust.

Ronald Reagan listened to his wife, Nancy, which was too bad, and to people like Ed Meese, Michael Deaver, and Paul Laxalt, which was even worse. George Bush sometimes listens to his wife, Barbara, who has a bit of common sense, but he listens more to the likes of Jim Baker and Alan Greenspan, who helped steer the country into economic disaster.

Bill Clinton will listen to his wife, Hillary, who is smart and independent-minded and who has built a national reputation as an advocate for children. Maybe he'll keep listening to his current advisers Robert Reich and Derek Shearer, who are among the best progressive economic and urban-policy analysts in the country. We hope he'll keep listening to Amory Lovins, whose work he constantly cites, and who will go down in history as the Einstein of alternative energy.

It's a good bet his first Supreme Court appointment will go to Mario Cuomo, who would bring the intellect, vigor, and progressive philosophy the court badly needs to counter William Rehnquist, Antonin Scalia, and Clarence Thomas.

Of course, Clinton will probably also listen to military hawk Les Aspin, and to Tim Wirth, who is overfriendly with the oil, gas, and livestock industries. Worse, he probably won't listen much to Jesse Jackson, or Ron Dellums, or Pat Schroeder, or any of the countless other progressive leaders who represent the non-white, non-male, non-suburban constituencies that make up the majority of the nation.

In fact, although Clinton's programs would help turn around the economic deterioration of the inner cities, he's failed to say much of anything about the more difficult, more lasting, and ultimately more dangerous social problem of widespread, systemic, and deeply entrenched racism. To make real change, he'll have to tackle more than economics. He'll have to talk about social justice, and the distribution of wealth, and a lot of things that typically send moderate Democrats scrambling for cover.

EARLY LESSONS

In the end, though, there's something else about Bill Clinton that makes him more than just a lesser-of-two-evils candidate.

Clinton is first and foremost a politician, and he's made it abundantly clear over the years that he'd rather sacrifice his principles than his career. But his personal, philosophical roots are in the Age of Vietnam, when Americans began to question the role of superpower, when war lost its romantic appeal, when a whole generation questioned the assumption that old men in uniforms should send young men to die.

Clinton did his best to avoid getting drafted and struggled with the moral and political consequences. He went to protest marches, watched kids just like him get beaten, gassed, and shot in the streets, and saw Martin Luther King Jr. and Jack and Bobby Kennedy die at the hands of assassins.

Even then, Clinton was thinking about his political future, and even then, he was playing games and making compromises. It's too bad he didn't inhale. But he hasn't forgotten all of what happened 25 years ago, and some of it must have been hard-wired into his brain, changing forever the way he would think about "national security," and "American interests," and what it means for the United States to wage war on foreign soil.

To steal a line from the New York Times, the American voters rarely have a perfect choice for president; at least this time, they have a clear one. Vote for Clinton and Gore. ●

The dynamic duo

By sending Boxer and Feinstein to the Senate, California can finally help break up the old-boys network

U.S. Senate BARBARA BOXER Six-year term

When Barbara Boxer announced last year that she was running for the United States Senate, we thought she'd lost her mind. Boxer was giving up one of the safest congressional seats in the country, maybe throwing away a chance to be the first woman to chair the Armed Services Committee, for a desperate bid in a race she couldn't possibly win.

We were wrong. When news of the House Bank fiasco broke, and reporters learned that Boxer had written more than 100 overdrafts on her checking account, just about every pundit in California figured she was political history.

Wrong again.

Boxer, we've all been reminded, doesn't like to give up. In 12 months of tenacious campaigning, she's emerged as the odds-on favorite to become the first liberal woman senator from the nation's largest state.

The race between Boxer and Bruce Herschensohn represents the clearest contrast on the California ballot.

Herschensohn sets his political course a few yards off Ronald Reagan's starboard bow: He calls for the abolition of the Department of Education and the Environmental Protection Agency and opposes abortion in all circumstances. He says the answer to the recession is to cut taxes on business, eliminate most environmental, workplace-safety, and public-health regulations, and allow the free market to operate unimpeded. He says military spending should be increased, that Star Wars is a fine idea, and that the best way to fight urban decay is to build more jails and get tough on crime. He's a dangerous nut, and it's a sad commentary on California politics that he still has a chance of getting elected.

And he does — make no mistake about it. The national Republican establishment is pouring in money to finance last-minute attack ads aimed at destroying Boxer's reputation and putting her opponent over the top. The election will come down to the wire, and, especially if the presidential race is over early, every lazy Democrat who decides not to bother voting will help send Bruce Herschensohn to the Senate.

Boxer has represented northern San Francisco and southern Marin County since 1982, when John Burton suddenly decided to give up his carefully gerrymandered congressional seat. By the middle of her second term, Boxer had won national fame by exposing the Pentagon's $7,000 coffee maker, made headlines attacking Interior Secretary Donald Hodel's flip-flop on offshore oil drilling (Boxer called it "Let's Break a Deal"), proved herself a Democratic team player, and earned a seat on the powerful Budget and Armed Services committees.

Along the way, she infuriated some local peace activists by supporting the ill-fated plan to bring the U.S.S. Missouri and its nuclear-armed battle group to San Francisco and fighting to keep the Presidio open as a military base. In 1984, siding with PG&E, Boxer signed onto a bill aimed at turning over more than 100 publicly owned hydroelectric dams, worth more than a billion dollars, to private utility companies. Her public appearances in the district became less frequent; Bay Guardian reporters found it almost impossible to get her on the phone.

But her voting record has always been solid (the League of Conservation Voters gave her a perfect 100 in 1988, 1990, and 1992, and the ACLU always rated her 90 or above) and she spoke out strongly against the war in the Persian Gulf and the Clarence Thomas nomination. (Boxer made national headlines and front-page photos when she led a group of congresswomen on a march to the Senate to demand that Anita Hill's charges be heard in full.)

She reversed her position on the death penalty, suddenly deciding she supported executions when she began her statewide campaign. But to her credit, on almost every other issue, she's campaigned as what she is: a Northern California liberal who is pro-choice, supports major defense cuts, is willing to raise taxes on the wealthy to fund education, opposes cuts in welfare programs, voted against limiting the Clean Air Act and wetlands protection, and generally comes out well to the left of the party's presidential nominee.

She's also a skilled, respected legislator who understands Capitol Hill politics and knows when and where to make a stand. We look forward to seeing her shake up the tired old-boys club that's been running the U.S. Senate for the past couple of hundred years.

U.S. Senate DIANNE FEINSTEIN Two-year term

It's hard for anyone who lived through nine years of a mayoral administration that came very close to destroying one of the world's great cities to endorse Dianne Feinstein for any public office.

But we backed her for governor over Pete Wilson in 1990 (no regrets) and, in 1992, we're supporting her for Senate over Wilson's old pal, John Seymour. The choice isn't pretty, but we think it's pretty clear.

Feinstein speaks proudly of her record as San Francisco's chief executive. But the truth is, Feinstein doesn't have much to brag about. She took over a battered, shell-shocked city in 1978, just days after the Jonestown massacre and hours after the assassinations of George Moscone and Harvey Milk, vowed to bring the community back together, and quickly proceeded to tear San Francisco apart.

She fired two of Moscone's pro-neighborhood planning commissioners and installed a solid pro-development majority that never once turned down a high-rise office project. She fired the creative-planning director, Rai Okamoto, and installed a compliant Dean Macaris, who presided over an orgy of development that can only be described as a vertical earthquake, more damaging to the city than any natural disaster since 1906. She let out-of-town speculators make a fortune in San Francisco gold and then take it away, leaving a few specks of dust behind. She watched housing prices soar, then vetoed effective rent control. She doubled bus fares, but refused to make downtown developers pay their fair share of local transit costs.

Her police department was riddled with violence and brutality, but she refused to support an effective citizen oversight agency. Her Fire Department was a cesspool of racism and sexism, but it took a lawsuit to force her to give women a fair chance to become firefighters. She personally negotiated a deal with PG&E that has cost the city millions of dollars a year. She provided all the services downtown wanted without raising taxes to pay for them, spent the short-term windfall from the building boom, and left Art Agnos and Frank Jordan to deal with the resulting budget crisis, which has decimated city services.

Feinstein says she's pro-choice, but she vetoed a harmless "Reproductive Rights Day" resolution in 1983, claiming it would be "divisive." She says she supports gay and lesbian rights, but she vetoed a domestic-partners bill the same year. She's running as a feminist, but none of the top officials in her administration were women. Save for two women (City Attorney Louise Renne and Treasurer Mary Callanan) she appointed to fill vacancies in elected offices, every person she named to head a major city department in her nine-year tenure was a man.

Feinstein, however, is running against John Seymour, the Republican Pete Wilson appointed to the seat he gave up when he was elected governor. There are two years left in Wilson's term, but under California law the person appointed to a vacant Senate seat must face the voters at the next regular election.

Seymour, who calls himself a moderate, has been a real disappointment: He killed the crucial California Desert Protection Act and filibustered to try to do the same thing to Rep. George Miller's water-policy reform plan. He voted for Clarence Thomas and supported the war in the Persian Gulf. He's consistently backed Bush's economic policies, and has done little to help California convert to a peacetime economy.

Feinstein and Seymour are both opportunistic centrists who cozy up to wealthy campaign contributors, and on many of the major issues they'd probably vote the same way. But somehow we can't imagine Feinstein sitting in a hearing room and quietly allowing her all-male colleagues on the Senate Judiciary Committee to pretend that sexual harassment wasn't a serious enough issue to block the confirmation of a Supreme Court nominee.

And in 1992, that's reason enough to send Dianne Feinstein to Washington. ●

Our picks for Congress

District 9
RONALD V. DELLUMS

For more than two decades, Ron Dellums has been swimming upstream against a Congress that considered him — and his Berkeley district — too radical to take seriously. But Dellums has never wavered in his commitment to fight for progressive positions and to do it so honorably that he would have to be respected. As his time on the Hill accumulates, so does his clout. From the South Africa sanctions bill to the annual Congressional Black Caucus budget, Dellums has articulated a vision of what a good government ought to be doing. Over time, he has seen the rest of the Congress start coming around to where he is.

From a progressive standpoint, Dellums' voting record is virtually flawless. Groups like Americans for Democratic Action, the League of Conservation Voters, the ACLU, and the AFL-CIO consistently give him 100 percent ratings. He slips up every now and then — he's still trying to keep open the big military bases in his home district. But overall, he's a rare, consistent progressive voice.

If anyone still needs a reason to vote for Dellums, consider this scenario: Clinton becomes president and names Les Aspin as his secretary of defense. Guess who succeeds Aspin as chair of the House Armed Services Committee? Right, our man Dellums, and we'd love to see him in a position to implement some of his proposals for slashing the military budget.

For 20 years Dellums has battled his colleagues who refused to cut the military budget and instead focus on human needs. Without fail, he was told the Soviet threat made it irresponsible, even unpatriotic, to withhold one nickel from the bloated military machine. Now that the Cold War is over, Dellums deserves a chance to go back to Washington and tackle the issues "on our turf" for once. We heartily endorse Dellums for another term.

DON EDWARDS

Don Edwards has spent 30 years in Congress representing San Jose, and he's a shoo-in for a 16th term. He's one of the most valuable members of the California delegation: The former FBI agent is one of the nation's leading civil liberties advocates — and he holds a senior position on the Judiciary Committee. Edwards shows no hesitation in blocking repressive bills before they ever get to the floor; the ACLU gives him a perfect 100 ranking, and we're happy to endorse him for another term.

District 7
GEORGE MILLER

Son of a powerful state senator, star graduate of the Phil Burton school of hard-ball politics, the brash 47-year-old Martinez congressman has become one of the most powerful members of the House. That's very good news for environmentally sensitive areas all over the country, including the San Francisco Bay.

Miller became chair of the Interior Committee last year and immediately declared war on California's wasteful, ecologically disastrous agricultural industry. His 1992 water-policy bill was a landmark in environmental reform, shifting some of the priority in federal water allocation away from big farmers who grow crops like tomatoes and rice (which don't belong in the desert) and toward ecosystems that depend on fresh water. It was also a first-rate political coup: By including in the bill dozens of water projects in Republican congressional districts, Miller built bipartisan support against a presidential veto.

Miller is also a strong advocate for children and has turned his Select Committee on Children, Youth, and Families into a forum for exposing problems and promoting solutions. He has tremendous potential and is only beginning to use it; we look forward to his next two years.

District 5
NANCY PELOSI

Nancy Pelosi had never been elected to any political office when she emerged in 1987 as the anointed heir to the congressional seat held by Phil and then Sala Burton. Pelosi was known chiefly as a Democratic Party fundraiser; a lot of San Franciscans wondered if she had the savvy to represent the city in Washington. Now, as she heads for a third full term, most of the critics have grudgingly come around.

Pelosi's voting record is admirable — the NAACP, the American Civil Liberties Union, the League of Conservation Voters, the National Abortion Rights Action League, and the National Women's Political Caucus all gave her a 100 percent rating last year.

Her seat on the powerful House Appropriations Committee helped her secure more than $389 million in federal funds this year for projects in San Francisco. Among other things, Pelosi won approval for more than $110 million to pay for the costs of converting the Presidio from military to civilian use over the next two years.

Pelosi continues to waffle on PG&E and the Raker Act. She's reluctant to make any noise about the threat that one of the city's government-licensed JOA newspapers will close down, although she agreed to look into the issue.

But overall, she's done a good job in Washington. We're pleased to endorse her for another term.

FORTNEY H. "PETE" STARK

"Pete" Stark has represented his southern Alameda County district for 20 years. Despite his friendly relations with real estate developers (and his embarrassing efforts to launch a political career for his son), he has a fairly progressive record. As a senior member of the House Ways and Means Committee, he's opposed regressive tax measures and fought bitterly with the medical industry over health-insurance reform. He deserves another term.

LYNN WOOLSEY

The district that Barbara Boxer has represented for the past 10 years has been reconfigured, and San Francisco is no longer in the picture. The new District 6 starts at the southern end of Marin County and stretches north into Sonoma, making it a bit more conservative, a bit more suburban and rural, and a lot less safely Democratic.

At first, it looked as if William Filante, a longtime Republican Assemblymember from San Rafael, had a serious shot at winning the seat. Filante, a physician, had considerable financial support from the medical industry and was poised to pick up a big chunk of national GOP money.

Then he was suddenly hospitalized with a brain tumor and had to suspend campaigning. If he were elected, it's not clear he could serve.

That's left Democrat Lynn Woolsey, a Petaluma City Council member, as the clear favorite to take over Boxer's job. She's won the support of local environmental and labor groups and leading feminists from around the country, and she has the strong backing of the national party leadership. We're pleased to endorse her too.

Woolsey has a perspective on social issues that's rarely seen in a candidate for Congress: She raised three kids by herself, going to school at night and getting welfare when she couldn't find work; she took in an aging parent with no health insurance and learned the Medical system the hard way. She eventually started and built a successful small business, and ran for City Council on an environmental platform.

As a City Council member, she's helped enact growth controls and forced developers to finance a pioneering public child-care program. She wants to make health-care reform and children's issues a top priority; she calls for a $400 billion cut in military spending over the next five years to fund social programs, education, and small-business development. She's strongly pro-choice and opposes the death penalty.

Woolsey is sensible, compassionate, and full of energy. She'll represent her district well.

NO ENDORSEMENT

Incumbent Rep. Tom Lantos was born in Hungary and fought the Nazis in the underground as a teenager. He fled his native country with the aid of Raoul Wallenberg and settled in the Bay Area in 1952. He worked as an economist for Bank of America, taught at San Francisco State, and in 1980 bucked the Reagan landslide and beat a Republican incumbent in a moderate congressional district.

The problem with Lantos is that he seems to think it's still 1940: He's gone along with almost every military intervention the Reagan and Bush administrations have launched. He made a public fool of himself by praising Oliver North in 1986 and did it again last year when he peddled the Kuwaiti government's slick public-relations show and led the congressional charge for the Persian Gulf War.

San Mateo County deserves better than a myopic cold warrior fighting past battles. We're eagerly awaiting a credible challenger.

In Marin County

Proposition A YES, YES, YES

The bulldozers are already tearing up one of the hills that are central to the design of Marin County's landmark civic center. But it's not too late to stop the destruction of the Frank Lloyd Wright building.

County politicians have approved a massive jail to be built on the civic center site, which will destroy the natural setting, and thus the original design intent of the building. The National Park Service, which two years ago declared the building a National Historic Landmark, has now listed the civic center as a "Priority One Endangered Landmark." The Park Service said the jail "will result in an irrevocable loss to the nation."

Vote yes to stop the new jail.

Landlord lies, downtown buys, and commie spies ... coming soon, to a mailbox near you

BY TIM REDMOND

THE FIRST MAJOR landlord salvo hit San Francisco voters early this week in the form of two colorful fliers designed to persuade tenants to vote against better rent control.

The target is Proposition H, a fairly mild measure on the November ballot that would limit annual rent hikes to 60 percent of the inflation rate. The fliers carry a message that tenant activists will recognize immediately, since local landlords have used it (in some form) at least five times over the past 10 years.

If the city tries to regulate rent increases, the old line goes, then landlords will be forced to find other ways to soak their tenants — and in the end you'll wind up paying even more.

The arguments to support this claim are often convoluted, but the bottom line is simple — rent control means higher rent. And the landlord operatives assume most tenant voters won't take the time to figure out how little sense it makes. In the past, the strategy has worked like a charm.

This time around, though, the propagandists seem to be struggling a bit. The early fliers are more confusing than convincing: They look like low-budget toothpaste ads, with cheap and nasty graphics, far too much text, and a sales pitch that reeks of a desperate little hustle.

Jack Davis, the political consultant who is running the landlords' No on Prop. H campaign, came up with a fairly good slogan — "It can't help you; it could hurt you." But in the two fliers that arrived in mailboxes this week, the slogan is buried under a mountain of text that would baffle most corporate lawyers.

"San Francisco rent law allows owners to bank rent increases they do not take," one flier reads. "If an owner chose [sic] not to increase rents by the allowable 4%, the ungiven percentage is automatically banked, and can be passed through to you at any time. For instance, if you didn't get a rent increase in three of the last four years, you may get one this year for 12%!"

You follow so far? Here's the kicker:

"Prop. H limits rent increases to 40% below the inflation rate. Under those circumstances, rental property owners would have no choice but to seek other ways to make up that 40%. It will hit you in your piggy bank."

Got it? Good — there's another flier waiting. "Proposition H would peg future rent increases to 60% of the consumer price index (CPI)," the second piece explains. "That's 40% below the inflation rate. Under Proposition H's formula, the allowable increase for 1992 would be 60% of 2.6 (CPI for 1992) that's [sic] 1.56%.

"While 1.56% may sound good to some people, let's be practical. Nobody can economically survive when costs exceed income by 40% — that's why Prop. H is unfair."

If you're more baffled than ever, join the club: You may be the latest victim of the landlords' secret strategy.

Prop. H is a simple, appealing measure; it would save most tenants money right away, starting Jan. 1. That makes it hard to oppose. But Davis understands the oldest rule in the committee's capsule descriptions:

• 1990-91 City Budget, Taxes vs. Spending Cuts. "Considered the key vote of 1991, a budget amendment proposed by Supervisor Hsieh separated the board into two camps: those who would cause city deficits by raising taxes and those who would cure city deficits by reducing spending."

• Municipalization of PG&E.

"The Board voted to approve an expensive study of a bad idea: a city takeover of the Pacific Gas and Electric Co. Since 1987, Chicago has wasted $1.2 million on studies and still can't decide whether to take over its local utility."

• Repeal Gulf War Sanctuary.

"In the wake of a Board resolution proclaiming the City a sanctuary for draft evaders, conventions were cancelled in protest and the City was lambasted in newspaper columns around the nation."

Just for the record, Chicago's energy options study forced the local utility to cut its rates by millions of dollars a year, saving far more than the cost of the study. After four years of spending cuts, San Francisco's deficit is just getting worse. And compared to, say, Los Angeles, which had no Gulf War sanctuary resolution, San Francisco's convention business is doing just fine.

CASTRO THEATER

Meanwhile, the mailing we've all been waiting for is headed for the press, ready to hit some 30,000 moderate Democrats and Republicans a day or two before the election.

The sponsor is Supervisor Bill Maher. The financing is still hidden. The idea is to attack Gonzalez and Hallinan, and thus promote the more conservative candidates Maher and downtown interests prefer (see Unsafe at Any Speed, 10/21/92).

The flier, my sources say, will feature a cover photo of Fidel Castro, with text that ridicules Hallinan for suggesting that one of the most enduring political figures of the late 20th century might have something interesting to say to the city of San Francisco.

Hallinan is no stranger to red-baiting — he saw it used against his mother and father in the McCarthy era. Gonzalez may find the attack to be an ugly, unpleasant shock. But the real shock will probably hit on Election Day, when Maher and his cronies discover that commie-bashing doesn't work in San Francisco: Never has, never will. Maher still won't return my phone calls, so I'll pass on my advice in print: Lighten up, Bill. You're just making a fool of yourself. ● the Book of Political Sleaze: When voters are confused, they tend to vote no.

Of course, all tenants really have to remember about Prop. H is this: Wealthy landlords are against it. Everyone else should vote yes.

SAM GINN'S SCORECARD

The two tenant-oriented No on H fliers will probably reach at least 100,000 San Franciscans.

But one of the most interesting fliers in town is going out to one of the smallest mailing lists. Only the members of the Committee on Jobs, the downtown business organization led by Pacific Telesis chair Sam Ginn, get a firsthand look at the group's fascinating "Board Watch" scorecard, which ranks the incumbent supervisors on the basis of nine key votes.

The scorecard, a copy of which was sent to my fax machine, provides a valuable look at how downtown rates the supervisors — and why.

For starters, the five incumbents who are up for re-election fall into two distinct camps. Tom Hsieh and Willie Kennedy voted the downtown line on at least seven of the nine litmus-test issues. On the other hand, Jim Gonzalez scored only 36 percent (three of nine); Angela Alioto, 22 percent (two of nine); and Terence Hallinan, 11 percent (one of nine).

Here are some of the top issues on the downtown scorecard, with

Clinton gets an A-, but neither candidate offers schools what they need: Money

BY KATHARINE BALL

PRESIDENT BUSH and Democratic challenger Bill Clinton both say they are "pro-choice" when it comes to parents choosing schools for their children, with one significant difference: Bush is promoting a plan (the "GI Bill for children") that would allow federal tax dollars to go toward tuition at private and parochial schools. Clinton advocates choice only among public schools.

The choice, or voucher, plan is the issue that has the most professional educators up in arms. It's also the education policy calculated to appeal most to middle-income voters. Other elements of the candidates' education plans, however, are more likely to have a real effect on the quality of education.

Clinton's plan is more comprehensive, calling for everything from full funding for Head Start, the preschool program for low-income children, to apprenticeship programs for non-college-bound teens, to job retraining for unemployed adults. There are some gaping holes: Why, for instance, should literacy programs be directed only at employed adults? What about the people who can't get jobs because their literacy skills are too poor? In contrast to the "education president's" plan, however, Clinton's plan really does have "the vision thing."

Bush offers some slogans and a couple of jury-rigged proposals underwritten by insignificant funding. He is silent on job training, whether for teenagers or for unemployed adults. His most significant deed as president has been to increase funding levels for Head Start.

Bush is campaigning mightily on his "America 2000" school-reform plan, which vaguely calls for "world-class academic standards and voluntary national exams." The Bush plan allocates $180 million (less than the total annual budget for San Francisco schools) to develop model schools around the nation. About $300 million more goes for training academies for teachers and for encouraging "school leaders."

The political center of the Bush plan is the GI Bill for children, named after the original GI Bill, which pays for a veteran's college education. This voucher plan is symbolically potent but substantively almost meaningless because of its low level of funding. Nevertheless, public-school supporters, the most vocal of whom are union lobbyists, abhor Bush's pro-school-choice rhetoric and want it to disappear from the public dialogue as soon as possible. If a voucher plan is enacted, they envision further erosion of funding for public schools, and job losses or pay cuts for teachers and other school employees.

The federal government "is removed quite a bit" from what actually transpires in California classrooms, said Jan Anderson, communications consultant for the California Teachers Association. But Washington does set the tone for the ongoing education-reform debate, he noted.

"If Clinton is elected, choice won't be paraded before the public like it is now," Anderson said. "It will disappear from the public agenda."

In fact, a total disappearance of the choice issue is probably wishful thinking on Anderson's part. A further-reaching proposal than Bush's is slated to appear on the California ballot in 1994. The California choice plan would allow at least half the state tax dollars currently spent on public education to shift to private schools.

But the "education president's" plan seems more calculated to pander to the pro-school-choice vote than actually to bring about widespread use of vouchers in American schools.

The Bush voucher plan would put $500 million into $1,000 "scholarships" for 500,000 children nationwide. If that money were distributed evenly among the 50 states, 10,000 children per state would each receive $1,000 to put toward private school tuition.

Bush's proposal would select voucher recipients from among low- and middle-income families. But a $1,000 scholarship alone is unlikely to help a child from a low-income family. The tuition at San Francisco's prestigious private University High School, for instance, is $10,600 this year. Even at some of the less-expensive parochial elementary schools in the area, $1,000 would pay no more than half the tuition.

By contrast, the voucher proposal that will appear on the 1994 California ballot allows any child in the state to claim at least half the amount that would be spent on him or her at a public school. This year, that amount would be about $2,500, said Jim Wilson, director of fiscal policy for the state Department of Education. The initiative, if passed, would enable the Legislature to allow up to the total public-school per-pupil amount (about $5,000 this year) to be spent at private schools.

In the final assessment, neither candidate's plan offers what California public schools need most: a direct infusion of funds that could be used for such things as books, equipment, and reduced class sizes. But Clinton's plans, not only for education, but for better access to health care, offer a constellation of policies that ought to improve the lot of California's poorest children and help the state's struggling economy by seeing that more people get work. An increased tax base could eventually yield, from state sources, the extra funding the schools need. ●

Bush-whacked

The stories the mainstream media refuse to print about the Bush administration

If the average American voter had been reading the alternative press's coverage of Election '88, the candidacy of George Bush would be finished by now.

SF BAY GUARDIAN

In a Nov. 2, 1988, special report

By RICHARD MEEKER

AS PRESIDENT, GEORGE BUSH has willingly violated his own stated notions of ethical conduct. He has proven himself to be so uninterested in the real job of being president that he has failed to follow through in key areas of environmental and foreign policy. He is so short-sighted that he has damaged the interests of those he's pledged to protect.

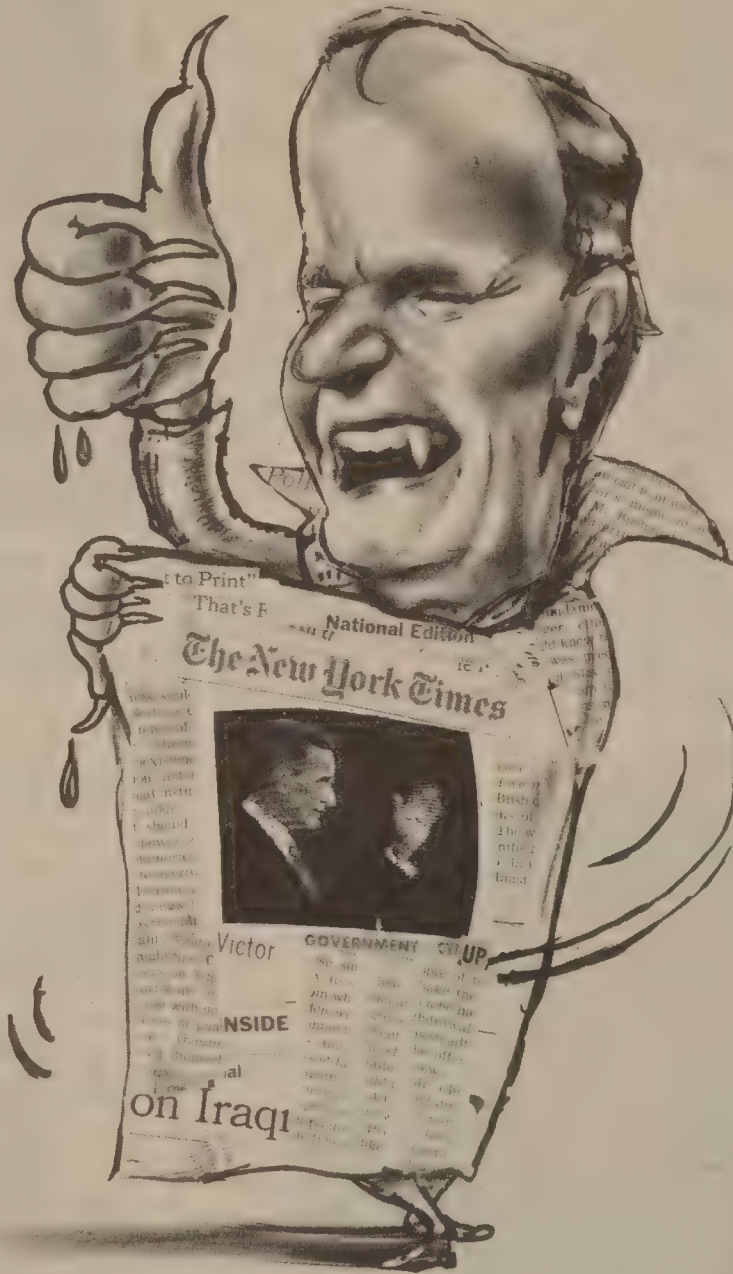

Readers of the alternative press know of these core weaknesses in their president. Americans who get their information from the daily newspaper and evening TV do not. Alternative journalism can offer these insights, because it's willing to shed traditional notions of objectivity. It also brings greater depth to reporting on key issues and is willing to dedicate more space to the stories that result.

Some of the time, the alternative press simply gives currency to important journalistic work being carried on by others. In the case of George Bush's presidency, the function of the alternative press is clear. It is to challenge the generally accepted notions of how he's done. Here, pulled together for the first time, are our most salient accounts of George Bush's White House years. Though not intended as the case against the president's re-election, these stories from publications like the Village Voice, Harper's, L.A. Weekly, San Francisco Bay Guardian, Willamette Week, Austin Chronicle, Common Cause Magazine, and Mother Jones paint a portrait unlike anything you can expect to find in the mainstream media between now and Nov. 3.

Four years ago, when George Bush was running for president, he declared his intention to become the "ethics president." Said Bush during his first week as president, "It's a question of knowing right from wrong, avoiding conflicts of interest, bending over backwards to see that there's not even a perception of conflict of interest." Such protestations notwithstanding, if any single characteristic emerges from the alternative press's coverage of Bush's presidency, it is a soullessness manifest by the complete absence of moral authority.

Lacking any grounding in policy or principle, Bush has relied instead on loyalty to those who've helped him get where he is today. Earlier this year, Common Cause Magazine, the Village Voice, and the Bay Guardian presented accounts of the so-called Team 100 — people who contributed at least $100,000 to the Bush election effort in 1988 (see "In the Bush Leagues," 10/14/92). Among the 249 members of the team, reported James Ridgeway in the Voice, were "famous deadbeat Donald Trump, S&L stickup man Charles Keating, and Wall Street takeover artist Henry Kravis [as well as] top executives from major investment firms, government contractors, multinational corporations, and oil companies."

Common Cause Magazine's writing staff of six spent three months searching through the federal bureaucracy to examine how members of Team 100 fared in their postelection dealings with the Bush administration. They found that the Bush admin-

• Reversed a 26-year government stance and its free-trade rhetoric by imposing anti-import tariffs on foreign cement at the behest of Southdown Inc., a cement maker whose general counsel, Edgar Marston III, also was on Team 100.

Where instances like these suggest outright impropriety, the conduct of George Bush's children these past four years raises a different concern. They have profited — enormously, questionably, and with little attention from the mainstream media — from their father's position. Nothing in the sordid accounts of their conduct in Denver's Westword, Miami New Times, or the Austin Chronicle suggests that their father has blocked prosecutions or otherwise conducted himself improperly. Rather, they show that he has produced children whose judgment and conduct merit the president's recent shrill characterizations of Bill Clinton.

In "Family Values," an article published in the September/October issue of Mother Jones, reporter Stephen Pizzo offered "the inside story of how three of the Bush boys built private fortunes by trading on their father's name, running with con men, lining their own pockets, and leaving financial ruin in their wake." Pizzo writes that a U.S. Secret Service agent assigned to the Bush family detail told him: "We warn them. But that's all we can do. We can't stop these kids from associating with someone they want to be with. All we can do after warning them is to sweep these guys with metal detectors when they come around."

"Bush," Pizzo concluded, "says he is proud of his sons. One of them rented himself out to a crooked developer who scammed HUD and helped pry millions out of Medicare to fuel a giant health-care scam. A second may have profited from an insider stock transaction in a gulf oil deal at the very time that U.S. soldiers were dying to make that region safe for oil. And the third son ran a savings and loan into the ground while shoveling millions of its taxpayer-backed dollars into the pockets of two deadbeat partners."

Along with questions about Team 100 and his children's behavior, there's the matter of the continuing and unprecedented bailout of the savings and loan industry. Somehow Bush has managed not to be tarred by this scandal. Yet, according to an interview in the Sept. 30 issue of the Bay Guardian, Bush involved himself directly — and unhelpfully — in the affairs of at least one crooked S&L. In "Bush, the CIA, and the Mob," the Bay Guardian's Dennis Bernstein and Susan

Burns interviewed Pete Brewton, formerly a reporter for the Houston Post who has become, in the words of Bernstein and Burns, "a leading authority on the savings and loan debacle, uncovering the relationships between the CIA, organized crime, and federally insured S&Ls."

"I want to talk about something ... that no one else knew about," Brewton told the Bay Guardian. "George Bush personally intervened in the federal regulation of an extremely dirty savings and loan in Florida that was doing deals with Mafia people and CIA people." The "dirty" S&L Brewton referred to was Sunrise Savings in Boynton Beach, Fla.

Sunrise had made loans to a number of people with known mob and CIA connections. According to Brewton: "The real story is, and it was confirmed to me by someone who has personal knowledge of it and has testified at the trial of Sunrise executives, that the chief executive officer of Sunrise went to George Bush ... and complained about the federal regulators cracking down on Sunrise Savings."

"Bush called in the person, a woman underneath Ed Grave, head of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, and dressed her istration:

- Killed a 2-year-old criminal tax investigation against the Southern Co., whose president was a Team 100 member. Extensive phone work produced a knowledgeable source who explained how the case was taken care of in the top levels of the Justice Department.

- Gave the green light to a massive aviation-field expansion project in Denver that seemed to serve no purpose save to benefit an adjacent business park whose backers included Team 100 member William Lloyd Davis.

- Revised the Clean Air Act to favor reformulated gasoline after Rodwrick Cook, a Team 100 member and head of Atlantic Richfield, spoke to Bush. Between 1988 and 1992 ARCO and two of its key officers gave the Republican Party $862,360. In return, they got a last-minute change to Bush's clean-air plan that allowed reformulated gasoline, an experimental Atlantic Richfield product that requires more oil than traditional gasoline and emits more pollutants than other fuels, to be marketed in this country.

GUARDIAN ILLUSTRATION BY NEMEOS

down and told her to back off of Sunrise Savings.... This has never come out. Here we have Bush personally intervening in a savings and loan whose failure cost taxpayers $700 million."

FOREIGN POLICY

This, according to conventional journalism, is the realm of George Bush's greatest accomplishments. With the aid of former Secretary of State James Baker, the president has produced a record of sufficient strength that he now promises to "unleash" Baker on domestic affairs as soon as the fall election is over.

Nowhere have Bush's apparent foreign policy successes been so great as in Panama and Kuwait. In these instances, too, however, the alternative press has been skeptical. In the case of Panama, papers like the Bay Guardian have offered poignant accounts of the consequences of the United States' ouster (and subsequent drug-crimes convictions) of Manuel Noriega. Our invasion led to increased drug trafficking, unemployment, and civilian unrest, though you wouldn't know it from accounts in the daily paper or on evening television.

"At least under Noriega we used to eat three meals a day," a resident of one Panamanian refugee camp told documentary filmmaker Barbara Trent. "Now we don't even eat one." Trent's recently released film, The Panama Deception, depicts the largely overlooked human costs of Bush's December 1989 invasion of our small Central American ally.

Clearly, Bush did not intend for this to be the outcome in Panama. Rather, he and his administration simply have lacked the ability to do anything to help this tiny Central American nation recover from the effects of the United States' intervention in its affairs.

A similar outcome was documented recently by the Village Voice's Robert Hennelly. "Our furtive and often illegal support of Iraq prior to the invasion of Kuwait," Hennelly wrote in his Aug. 11 story, "is a domestic scandal that threatens to undermine President Bush's last major political asset — his reputation as a shrewd international statesman. At its most innocent, the Bush administration's support of Iraq was merely an act of stupidity. At worst, that support was a frightening exercise in capitalistic opportunism (we made money both supporting and attacking Hussein) and white-collar crime (many of the key players had received money from Iraq; others were heavily invested in companies that both armed Iraq and then beat it into the ground)."

Among other things, the Village Voice's chronology of events in the Persian Gulf reveals "the unsavory role of the media itself in the story."

"By its pliancy, the media became the government's most important collaborator," the Voice stated, "first ignoring the secret effort to support Saddam Hussein against all reason, and then helping to shape the will to war by overstating the size of the enemy, exaggerating the scope of Iraqi war crimes, underestimating the civilian or collateral damage, and recreating, with the help of Hill & Knowlton [a Washington, D.C.-based public relations firm], our 'ally,' despotic Kuwait, as a democracy."

"This submissiveness," the Voice concluded, "turned the major media outlets, and in particular the television networks, into the scriptwriters of the world's largest snuff film."

(The alternative press, it should be noted, did not stand by idly during this period. On Jan. 10, 1991, nine publications — including L.A. Weekly, The Nation, and the Village Voice — and four writers filed suit in U.S. District Court challenging the constitutionality of the Department of Defense's restrictions on the press during the war. The Association of Alternative Newsweeklies subsequently joined the case as a "friend of the court." The case was dismissed when the war ended, before it could be heard on its merits.)

Recent accounts in the alternative press show the continuing failure of the Bush administration to achieve democracy in Kuwait. As Dennis Bernstein and Larry Everest note in the Sept. 9, 1992, issue of the Bay Guardian: "Reports from human rights monitors detail an ongoing Kuwaiti campaign to punish and expel the 350,000 Palestinians living in Kuwait before the war. Today, all but 60,000 Palestinians have been driven out by a combination of summary executions, torture, detention, forced expulsions, and a variety of other pressures."

THE ENVIRONMENT

America's mainstream press has provided clear-headed accounts of the environment and energy policies of the Bush administration. It has reported that in virtually every arena where the exploitation of a resource has been pitted against its preservation, the president with supposed "zero tolerance" for polluters has come down on the side of exploitation.

Bush's energy policy, which promotes continued reliance on oil, serves as a good example of his environmental thinking these past four years. To avoid undue dependence on foreign oil, Bush last year proposed opening environmentally sensitive areas to drilling — including the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge in Alaska.

Similarly, Bush has passed to Vice President Quayle the role he himself filled in Reagan's White House. There, Bush's Task Force on Regulatory Relief fought a range of regulations, many of which concerned the environment.

These and other activities have been widely reported. What has not gotten appropriate attention is the way in which Bush's anti-environmental actions have had the effect of stymieing the various resource-exploiters he's claimed to want to help.

Just this month Willamette Week offered an interesting look at the untoward consequences of the Bush administration's battle over the spotted owl in the Pacific Northwest. No issue more clearly outlines the significance of the Endangered Species Act Bush says he would like to rewrite. Nor does any environmental issue have greater resonance in the most environment-conscious region of the country.

Willamette Week's account offers a stirring example of how the Bush administration's anti-environmental extremism has been detrimental to the very timber workers whose livelihoods Bush has vowed to protect. Writing for the Portland newsweekly, Jill Smith concluded: "Bush has hurt the timber industry.... During the past five years, four federal judges have consistently ruled that federal agencies under Republican control violated the nation's environmental laws, prompting sweeping injunctions on timber sales in the Northwest."

Initially, by "sanitizing" a federal report on the spotted owl, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Department illegally delayed the application of the Endangered Species Act to the spotted owl. This resulted in nearly 120,000 additional acres of owl habitat being sold for timber produc-

Who (sic) do you trust?

AS BUSH HAMMERS Clinton on the character thing, a flurry of new reports of Bush's undercover dirty tricks, and new confirmation of previous stories, has been hitting the newsstands and bookstores. For example:

- In the current issue of the New Yorker, Murray Waas and Craig Unger allege that then-Vice President Bush made a secret trip to the Middle East in 1986 to encourage Saddam Hussein to step up air attacks against Iran. The object of these bombing raids was reportedly to increase Iran's need for air-defense weapons, making the Ayatollah's government more amenable to an arms-for-hostages swap with the United States.

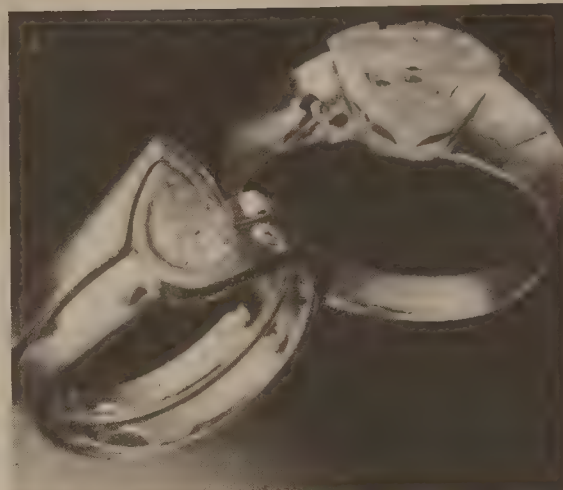

- William Safire has for months been reporting on efforts by the Bush administration to rearm Iraq prior to Saddam's invasion of Kuwait. Now Safire says that there may be a criminal coverup of these activities.

- According to Richard Secord in his new book, Honored and Betrayed, Vice President Bush was not at all "out of the loop" in the Iran-Contra operation.

- Ari Ben-Menashe in his newly published Profits of War claims to have seen Bush meeting with Iranians in Paris in October 1980, to finalize an agreement to delay the release of American hostages until after the election.

- In Bush, the Mafia and the CIA (see Bay Guardian, 9/30/92), which will not appear in bookstores until after the election, Pete Brewton, a reporter for the Houston Post, charges that Bush delayed the closing of several savings and loan institutions, at great cost to the taxpayers, to benefit his family and friends.

NEWS

tion before the spotted owl was designated an endangered species.

According to Willamette Week: "A recovery plan could have been adopted by 1989, and timber communities could have been well on their way to an easier economic transition.... But with less spotted-owl habitat available, recovery measures will be more severe over the long term." Then, in 1990, "At the same time the [Bush] administration was releasing dire economic predictions of how a spotted owl recovery plan would cost timber workers their jobs, it hid a companion report on how to mitigate economic damage from logging cutbacks."

Similarly, the federal Bureau of Land Management (BLM) refused to follow an owl-recovery plan proposed by a committee of scientists. The result was that another federal judge, Helen Frye, halted timber sales on 2.5 million acres of BLM land in the Pacific Northwest.

Finally, Willamette Week notes: "In addition to causing injunctions of timber sales and delays in recovery plans, the Republican administration has refused to take other measures, such as a restricting log exports, which could help timber communities.... Bush and his fellow Republicans have simplified the timber crisis to a matter of jobs vs. owls, diverting attention from the much-needed debates over jobs vs. exports, jobs vs. automation and jobs vs. trickle-down economics."

Similar conflicts have emerged over wetlands in the East and South and over mining policies in the Midwest. Throughout, Bush has managed to cast himself as siding with the beleaguered logger, fisher, or farmer, rather than as the direct source of tens of thousands of pink slips in the nation's natural-resource industries.

THE LARGER AGENDA

The conventional news media have recently made much of NAFTA, the North American Free Trade Agreement. This arcane document has even become a campaign issue, as Bush has spoken in the debates and on the campaign trail of his clear leadership in this area and of his ability "to get the job done for the American people."

What the conventional press has failed to recognize is that far more significant trade action is occurring elsewhere, in the 6-year-old Uruguay Round of talks on the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, commonly referred to as GATT. GATT, writes Walter Mead in the September Harper's, is "the forty-four-year-old treaty that lays down the code of conduct for international trade among most of the world's nations."

Those Americans who read the daily newspaper or watch the evening news on television most likely have been left with the impression that Bush's administration has yet to arrive at an economic agenda. Mead puts the lie to any such assumption.

"The Uruguay Round," he writes in his Harper's essay, "is where George Bush has most arduously pressed his agenda for a second term as President."

Just what is that agenda? According to Harper's, Bush is pushing for trade agreements that would create a new world government — "a global corporate utopia in which local citizens are toothless, workers' unions are tame or broken, environmentalists and consumer advocates outflanked." In Mead's view, the key to the current GATT proposal is to be found in proposed treaty language concerning so-called technical barriers. He cites two provisions. The first is from Section G.3: "Technical regulations shall not be more trade-restrictive than necessary to fulfill a legitimate objective, taking account of the risks non-fulfillment would create."

Then there's this from Section G.5: "Parties are fully responsible under this Agreement for the observance of all provisions of Article 2. Parties shall formulate and implement positive measures and mechanisms in support of the observance of the provisions of Article 2 by other than central government bodies."

As Mead reads this obscure wording, laws and regulations of the United States that conflict with the rules and regulations of other countries will have to be "harmonized," with the result that "one can expect in the coming years that there will be GATT challenges to the Clean Air Act, the Endangered Species Act, and the Marine Mammal Protection Act, potentially resulting in the gutting of America's tough (by international comparison) environmental standards."

"George Bush's [trade] program," the Harper's essay concludes, "serves nobody's interests — not even, in the long run, the interests of the multinational corporations that blindly back it."

How can all of this have gone unreported by America's daily newspapers and TV networks? The omissions of the mainstream press's coverage of George Bush's White House years are so great as to suggest nothing less than a media conspiracy of silence. Nothing could be further from the truth. What's really at work here — and in most major areas of news gathering — is institutional inertia. The mass media's laziness, inattention, lack of journalistic enterprise, pretenses of fairness, and outright cowardice make them incapable of serving their audience's needs.

So don't be surprised next month when the mainstream media take the credit for Bush's defeat. The operative ingredient in the postelection reshapes won't be elitist liberal bias. Rather, the pundits who speak for the mainstream media will be applauding themselves for the simple reason that it's the easiest and most self-serving thing they can do. ●

Richard Meeker is the publisher of Willamette Week in Portland, Ore. His Nov. 2, 1988, analysis of George Bush in the Bay Guardian and other alternative papers was named the top underreported story of 1988 by Project Censored.

This time I'll vote

By JUNE JORDAN

THIS YEAR's presidential election will be very difficult for a lot of good people. You have four white men running for power. One of them is the father of at least two criminals. All of them are white, male, Christian, heterosexual, married, English-speaking, and rich. It is not a picture representing most of us who live here. If anybody cared to examine the relevant statistics, she or he would discover that the rich, the well-to-do, or, for that matter, middle-class folks with job security, constitute an overbearing, offensively concentrated, and fast-shrinking minority.

Today more Americans qualify as poverty-stricken than anytime since 1964. Back then, Lyndon Johnson responded with his War on Poverty. Our current Grand Wizard of the White House deletes the subject of poverty from his cue cards altogether and, instead, attempts to take us into War on Iraq, Round 2.

Next, there's gender.

In this media-declared Year of the Woman, both political parties have opted to omit the female from their most serious consideration. And despite the female majority of the population, and even if all women seeking elective office were to emerge victorious, women — most Americans — remain outrageously underrepresented or not represented.

Next, there's race.

If you add Native Americans and African Americans and Latino Americans and Chicanos and Asian Americans together, you do not come up with four white men. You do not come up with a homogeneous critical mass. You do not come up with one English-speaking Voice of America.

Next, there's sexuality.

Unlike the vice president, I am not prepared to say that heterosexuality is right or wrong. But what's good about it? Can anybody tell me that heterosexuality will stop unconstitutional and fascist intolerance and hate crimes?

Next, there's religion.

Thanks to the Republican platform and the Republican National Convention, religion has become a political issue: Shall there be separation between church and state? What if you don't go to church? What if you're Jewish? Or Muslim? Or Buddhist? Or nothing? Is God on our side against the Arabs, the Japanese, the European community? And whose Holy Tablet shall set forth the commandments in a democracy?

Next, there's democracy.

Thanks to the Republican platform and the Republican National Convention, democracy has become a political issue: From the many shall we become four white men? Shall we become Barbara or Marilyn? Or blond? Or fighter pilots flying over South Central Los Angeles?

Next, there's marriage.

A strong, increasing number of Americans of voting age or older remain verifiably single — i.e., not married and/or never married. Divorce rates suggest that conventional conjugal arrangements often lack something attractively compelling. So what? In Seattle, it rains a lot. In California, hardly ever.

When I think about my country I try to stay with the facts. I try to stay home, first of all, and mind my own business. Kuwait, for example, is far from my mind working overtime to understand drugs and so-called budget crises and the taking away of food and clothing from American families and the evaporation of federal aid to our cities, which are where most of us have to walk and look for work and try not to dread the cold ending of another day on the streets. When I think about my country I do not pretend that everyone else is a lot or exactly like me. I accept and want to understand the stranger histories and languages and kitchen-table rituals and romantic inventions of other Americans.

And now I am afraid for my life. I am afraid that this election year it is my life that has become the target. It is my skin. It is my body furious for freedom. It is my heart that will not submit to hatred or dictatorship. It is my head that will not bow to priorities of power versus priorities of justice and domestic, equitable redistribution of our national wealth.

And so I will choose two of the four white men. Two of them have not yet proven themselves inhumane and besotted by fantasies of faraway conquest. Two of them have attempted to speak about trees and jobs and the rich. Two of them have yet to go on public record against the necessity and the preservation of public education. Two of them apparently regard national health care as a desirable entitlement rather than a neo-communist threat. Two of them have yet to veto civil rights legislation. Two of them espouse a woman's right to abortion.

And so this time there will be no jokes. This time there will be no cynical baloney about "the lesser of two evils." When somebody decides that you, in fact, are evil incarnate — because you're not white or not middle-class or not married or not heterosexual or not English-speaking or not crazy about armed force — then it's not about "the lesser of two evils." It's about absolutely eviscerating the evil of insolence of those who categorize other Americans, other people, as "wrong." It's about throwing the Republicans out.

This time I am voting for myself and my family values: I am voting for war against poverty, AIDS, breast cancer, hate crimes, and censorship. I am voting against the war against people of color inside and outside the U.S.A. I am voting choice. I am voting Democratic. ●

From wonk to monk

Ignoring foreign policy won't make it disappear

By HOWARD LEVINE

PUNDITS ARE FOND of describing Bill Clinton as a policy "wonk," but when it comes to foreign policy, he seems more like a "monk," trying to remain cloistered from the world beyond our borders.

During a loud and vocal campaign, Clinton has maintained a monastic silence about foreign policy. He has refrained from denouncing Bush's international agenda. From the "liberation" of Kuwait to the invasion of Panama, from Central America to Somalia, from Tiananmen Square to Bosnia-Herzegovina, Bush has careened from disaster to debacle. Yet Clinton has not made these fiascoes a campaign issue.

That silence is probably due in part to campaign strategy: Pundits and polls say George Bush is weak domestically but appears strong on foreign affairs. But Clinton's other problem in attacking Bush's military adventures is that he embraced most of them.

In many other crucial areas, Clinton and Bush offer distinct alternative paths. But in foreign policy they have been traveling the same road.

Only in one foreign-policy area — a crucial one — is a Clinton administration likely to turn in a different, better direction. Bush has held back U.S. payments to international groups like the World Health Organization to punish them for carrying out family-planning and abortion programs in poor countries. Clinton is likely to back these programs — one of the most crucial kinds of assistance poor countries, and especially women, need.

On most other foreign-policy issues, however, there is little difference between Clinton and Bush, and on some, Clinton's position is to the right of the president's.

You don't get to do much about foreign policy as a governor, but when Clinton had a chance, he went all the way in backing the administration's adventurers and their Contra friends waging war on Nicaragua. During the Reagan administration, Clinton willingly dispatched National Guard troops to Honduras at a time when many people believed the troops were going there to facilitate the Contra invasion of Nicaragua.

Clinton even let the administration's Central America cowboys use a military airstrip in Mena, Ark., as a main launching site for illegal flights (taking arms, other materials, and, maybe, bringing back drugs) into Central America. Clinton also awarded Contra leaders Arkansas' highest civilian medals.

MISSING POINTS

During the campaign, Clinton has failed to go after Bush's foreign policy even in areas wide open to attack. In an extremely telling moment during the final presidential debate, Perot raised the issue of Bush's prewar support for Saddam Hussein, and the administration's refusal to release the transcript of Saddam's discussion with U.S. Ambassador April Glaspie just before he invaded Kuwait. Saddam has released a version that implies he got tacit U.S. permission to take northern Kuwait, a charge Bush denies.

The silence from Clinton, who might have been expected to echo Perot and really hammer Bush, was deafening. Clinton's celebrated flip-flop on the war may well have made him reluctant to let the talk stay on that subject. He also might have had to acknowledge that some Democrats have conspired with the Republicans to cover up the truth about U.S. support for Iraq. And many of his supporters might be upset about the fact that Clinton has, in the past, criticized Bush for ending the war while Saddam remained alive.

For the past two months, the media have been filled with reports of direct Bush complicity in the Iran-Contra affair. George Schultz and Caspar Weinberger said Bush sat in on "dozens" of meetings where the arms-for-hostages deal was discussed. But have Clinton or other Democrats raised that issue in debates or ads? No.

Less well publicized, but at least as disastrous in its results is the transformation of the United States, under Reagan and Bush, into a major world deadbeat refusing to pay millions in back United Nations dues. Clinton has failed to point out the hypocrisy of stiffing the international body and at the same time manipulating it to back the United States in the Gulf War.

The Bay Guardian faxed the Clinton campaign some questions about the candidate's views on the UN debt and whether he would see that the United States pays up. At press time, the campaign had not answered. Clinton, however, has expressed support several times for working through the UN to solve international crises.

Even on the foreign-policy issue he does talk about, the North American Free Trade Agreement, Clinton casts it as mainly a domestic "jobs" issue. Although he does say he would insist on protection for the environment and U.S. jobs, he rarely mentions the potential impact of the free trade agreement on people in Mexico and Canada.

He seems indifferent to the plight of workers who aren't American. One intrepid television reporter once asked Clinton what he thought about the U.S. loans bankrupting many Third World governments. Clinton expressed not one word of sympathy for the people of these countries, who often go hungry as they watch the lion's share of their country's budget go to pay interest on U.S. debt. Instead, Clinton said the numbing debt burden was bad because it meant these countries couldn't afford to buy enough U.S.-made goods.

RIGHT-WING BEDFELLOWS

In the campaign itself, Clinton has drawn on support from some U.S. groups with extreme right-wing agendas.

Clinton, for example, has managed to wrest from Bush a sizable chunk of right-wing Cuban support — and about $275,000 — in Miami and Coral Gables. He's weasled this usually fanatically Republican patronage by making a point during his nominating speech at the Democratic National Convention of singling out Cuba as a cancer on the body politic. More importantly, he's endorsed the recently passed "Democracy for Cuba Act," which tightens the U.S. trade noose around Cuba and punishes countries who ignore the embargo.

Even those Cuban Americans still clinging to Bush, like the powerful Jorge Mas Conosa (head of the Cuban American Foundation), haven't been bullying anyone to abandon Clinton, even though the Cuban vote could determine who takes Florida Nov. 3.

And on the critical question of the Palestinian-Israeli peace process, Clinton has adopted the most rigid right-wing position. Stephen Solarz, until his recent defeat one of Israel's most ardent apologists in Congress, is mentioned often as a candidate for secretary of state in a Clinton administration.

Clinton has opposed the creation of a Palestinian state, endorsed Jerusalem as the undivided capital of Israel, attacked Bush for being too hard on Israel, and supported the $10 billion in U.S. loan guarantees to Israel without a halt to Israeli settlements in occupied Arab territory.

These are the positions supported by Yitzhak Shamir's Likud government, positions rejected even by the anxious Israeli voters. A Clinton administration, by easing up on Israel, may encourage the government to harden its negotiating stance, thus jeopardizing the Arab-Israeli peace talks.

In general, Clinton's view of the international scene seems to have gone downhill since his draft-dodging days. His trip with other students to European countries, including Sweden and the Soviet Union, suggests that at that time Clinton was willing to look at the world beyond the borders of the United States. ●

The scary street

BY JEAN TEPPERMAN

WHAT THIS presidential election is really about is whether we will dare go out of the house. For some people, immediate survival is at stake: whether they will suffer and die without health care, whether they will be homeless, hopeless, hungry. But if Bush is re-elected, all of us, whenever we step out the front door, will step into an increasingly malignant environment.

In the streets we will encounter desperate people who can't get the income or job skills or drug rehabilitation or mental-health help they need. The dangers of these encounters are already dominating our lives: The news is filled with stories about the popularity of walled, guarded suburban communities, about urban parents reluctantly moving their families out of an increasingly hostile city.

Margaret Brodtkin, executive director of Coleman Advocates for Children and Youth, argues over and over that depriving children of good health care, child care, education, and social services will hurt us later by increasing crime and social disruption. These children, she warns, will grow up to be your neighbors. She has said this so often that she privately jokes about the "help us or we'll kill you" argument.

For a long time I didn't understand how anyone could fail to be persuaded by that argument. That was because I failed to understand the fundamental Reagan/Bush philosophy.

In fact, if you have enough money, Margaret's wrong. You'll never have to encounter the increasing numbers of poor and desperate people. You can live in your walled suburban enclave and take your high-speed electric train to a heavily guarded office tower. At night, you go back to your luxury fortress, shop by computer, order dinner by fax. In a few years, when a complete selection of movies is available over the TV cable, videotape rental stores will become obsolete, and the last reason to leave your house will disappear.

You can even escape the worst industrial pollution. They don't build toxic-waste dumps in Hillsborough or Blackhawk. And if the atmosphere gets too bad, you can equip your home with air- and water-filtration systems.

People who can afford it are also sheltering themselves and their children in private enclaves that take the place of public life and institutions. The movement for vouchers to subsidize private-school tuition is an expression of despair at the possibility of decent public schools.

Public schools — and parks, streets, and libraries — are dirty, dangerous, and inadequate. As the Republican-led "tax revolt" has withdrawn resources from public institutions, they have deteriorated so far that right-wingers can point to them and say, "See, public efforts don't work." That justifies a new round of budget cuts.

For the first time in U.S. history, significant numbers of people seem to have completely given up on the possibility that any public, community institution or place can be any good. The idea of collective, civic effort and pride in the town school, park, public spaces — that seems quaint, Norman Rockwell. Save yourself and get what you can.

Even people who don't buy the ideology have to live with its consequences. We purchase whatever private security and comfort we can afford. But most people can't afford the total, secure enclaves. We struggle to protect ourselves however we can. People use cars as tanks, against the dangers of encountering their neighbors on the streets. Parents warn children to stay inside and watch TV after school because going out is too dangerous.

PROTECTION RACKET

This is what the election is about. The Reagan/Bush pitch appeals to people who can, or hope they can, buy their way into private enclaves. There they can ignore the threatening outside environment. They don't have to bother paying taxes to support good public schools and parks, health care or social services, public works and infrastructure investment. Let those people in the cities fight it out with their drugs and drive-by shootings.

Those people. These growing economic divisions are especially virulent because they're reinforced by racial and ethnic divisions. For some reason it seems easier for people to live untroubled by the fact that children are hungry and sick and neglected, that young adults are jobless and desperate, if those children don't look like their own children. Their skin is dark, their features are different.

Maybe it isn't really possible for people of many ethnic groups to land together in one country and really become members of one society, one community. In the Gettysburg Address, Lincoln said a country based on freedom and equality was the American experiment being tested in the Civil War. Now I think we are testing the other American experiment: Can we connect to one another enough to function together as a society?

Clinton and Gore are Ivy League Bobbsey Twins, rich white males with lots of ties to big business. They wouldn't be my first choice to lead the country. The sight of them together up on the platform says to me, as it says to most Americans, "Not you, not anyone remotely like you or anyone you know, yet has access to the inside, the top."

That's why a lot of people are angry and don't trust those guys to be genuinely committed to taking care of the people and the environment. But I don't really worry much about their sincerity, because of what I learned in school about the tight packers and the loose packers.

TIGHT PACKERS/ LOOSE PACKERS

When the slave trade really got going in the beginning of the 19th century, owners of slave ships divided into opposing philosophical camps. The tight packers believed that if you crammed lots of African people into each ship, many would get sick and die and go crazy, but you'd still end up with more slaves when you got to America.

The loose packers, on the other hand, thought if you start with fewer people, but give each one enough space and air (maybe food, I'm not sure), you'd end up with more money at the end. More people would survive and could fetch a better price because they would be in better health.

At worst, without giving him the benefit of any kind of doubt, Clinton represents the economic strategy of the modern-day loose packers: Make sure people have health care, job training, and literacy programs ("for every person with a job"), and they will be much more productive employees. At an impressive gathering of loose packers in Silicon Valley last month, the computer CEOs explained they were backing Clinton because his plans for higher-education assistance and job-training were crucial to their companies. It's the strategy of a high-skill, high-wage economy.

We've just been through 12 years of the tight-packer strategy, pushing us down, squeezing us tighter. It has been a strategy of eliminating good jobs and replacing them with minimum-wage jobs and unemployment. Tax cuts for the rich have raided public treasuries, so that our public resources, from schools to bridges, are crumbling. For people with money and power, it's the low-wage strategy: Take the money and run.

This year the presidential campaign represents much more than the usual lesser-of-two-evils choice. It represents an opportunity to reject the kind of future that the Reagan/Bush strategy is rapidly creating: a society of mass misery and massive private wealth, of deprivation and danger.

Electing Clinton and Gore won't guarantee economic health, which they talk about a lot, or social justice, which they mention very little. But it would help us turn the country in a different direction, based on the view that the well-being of everyone — even of the privileged — requires at least a minimum level of health and well-being for people, the environment, and public institutions. That our futures are connected. That we depend on one another. ●

R.I.P., JOA

And then there was one in San Antonio, Tulsa, Shreveport, Knoxville, and maybe San Francisco

BY MARTIN ESPINOZA

MANY CITIES WHOSE two newspapers are operating under federally licensed joint operating agreements (JOAs) are quietly being turned into one-newspaper towns without serious investigation or protest from the Justice Department in the waning days of the Bush Administration.

"R.I.P. JOA: The Newspaper Preservation Act of 1970 was supposed to preserve competition within a market by allowing dailies to merge business operations but keep separate editorial voices," reports a recent article by Christy Fisher, printed in the Sept. 28 issue of Advertising Age. But, instead, wrote Fisher, "industry observers expect more JOA's — and more newspapers — to disappear in the next decade as those agreements are renegotiated or expire."

Last year JOAs' weaker papers were killed by publishers of the stronger paper in Shreveport, La. (Gannet) and Knoxville, Tenn. (E.W. Scripps). This year there has been selling activity in four cities — San Antonio, Texas; Pittsburgh; Honolulu; and Tulsa, Okla. — and persistent rumors in San Francisco.

The latest JOA victim, the Tulsa Tribune, fell Sept. 30, when, after 73 years of publication, it dissolved its partnership with the Tulsa World, which was founded in 1941. The afternoon Tribune agreed to accept $30 million from the morning World and bow out of the newspaper business four years before the expiration date of their JOA agreement.

"Morally, the Justice Department should have moved on all of these, but legally it doesn't have to under the Newspaper Preservation Act," said Robert Picard, editor of the Journal of Media Economics.

Critics of the Justice Department say the question for a possible new administration is whether it sees newspaper competition as important. During his tenure, Attorney General Richard Thornburgh approved more JOAs than anyone else, said Picard.

"The Newspaper Preservation Act was never meant to save newspapers," Picard added. "It was intended to protect the pockets of owners of JOA papers." Picard added that under the Newspaper Preservation Act (NPA), once a JOA is established, there is no provision for ongoing public scrutiny.

In JOA moves around the country:

- In Pittsburgh, the E.W. Scripps newspaper chain is trying to sell the Pittsburgh Press Co., the agency that operates the business aspect of the JOA between the Pittsburgh Press and the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette. Post-Gazette owners are considering buying the Press Co.
- Last summer, a Teamsters' strike blocked a move by the Press Co. to consolidate distribution routes — a move that would have eliminated 45 to 600 Teamster employees. After more than 100 days of strike, according to an article by Mark Fitzgerald in the Oct. 10 issue of Editor and Publisher, E.W. Scripps Chief Executive Officer Lawrence Leser said that the Press Co. may have been too severely damaged to resume operations. But on Sept. 30, the same day the Tulsa Tribune was set to stop its presses, Teamsters representatives called for a congressional investigation into what it claimed was an attempt by Scripps to get out of its JOA contracts, which don't expire until 1999.

• In San Antonio, the Hearst Corp., owner of the San Francisco Examiner, is demonstrating how it establishes one-newspaper towns. On Oct. 6, Hearst, which owns the weaker San Antonio Light, announced it would buy the San Antonio Express-News from Rupert Murdoch, the British newspaper giant. In a separate article by Mark Fitzgerald, printed in the Oct. 10 issue of Editor and Publisher, Hearst claimed the Light had lost $60 million since 1987.

"Despite vigorous efforts to reverse the trends, Hearst concluded that the Light's losses are irreversible," Fitzgerald reported. Soon after, Hearst bought the Express-News for $185 million in cash. According to industry experts, other cities could follow San Antonio's example.

"Cincinnati looks like a good candidate for closure. Detroit has been a financial disaster but is [improving]. The Evansville, Ind., JOA ends in 1998, and there is a strong likelihood something will happen in San Francisco," Fisher quoted Picard as saying in the Advertising Age article.

• Sources say that William Randolph Hearst III, frustrated with a financially burdensome JOA run by the San Francisco Newspaper Agency, will pay a premium price to make the city a one-newspaper town, with himself at the helm.

The latest rumor in San Francisco is that the Times Mirror Co., owner of the Los Angeles Times, is inquiring about the dollar value of the San Francisco Newspaper Agency, the company that operates the business end of the JOA between the San Francisco Chronicle and the Examiner. Times Mirror reportedly asked First Boston Corp., an investment banking firm, how much the SFNA is worth. ●

PG&E's good-government fund

THIS TABLE SHOWS SOME of PG&E's campaign contributions for the 1992 calendar year through Sept. 30. These contributions helped ensure the votes that passed SB 1757, sponsored by state Sen. Rebecca Morgan (R-Menlo Park), a bill that makes it more difficult for cities to municipalize the property of private utility companies. The only senator who received a contribution but voted against PG&E on this issue was McCorquodale. In the Assembly, only Delaine Eastin and Barbara Lee voted against the contribution influence. The governor recently signed the bill into law.

At the local level, PG&E has successfully fostered San Francisco City Hall's reluctance to investigate the city's 1988 "sweetheart" contracts with PG&E and the Turlock and Modesto irrigation districts. None of the incumbents the Bay Guardian endorsed (Terence Hallinan, Jim Gonzalez, and Angela Alioto) received any money from PG&E this year. Carole Migden, who, along with Hallinan and Gonzalez, sits on the Finance Committee that is currently investigating the contracts, also received no PG&E cash.

ask ISADORA

THAT OLD DEVIL DESIRE

BY ISADORA ALMAN

Q: I have always had a high libido, higher than most of the men I have slept with. Now, at 28, I seem to be going through a sexual peak. Unfortunately, I have no partner, and my sexual drive is turning into consuming sexual frustration. Is there any way to reduce sexual need? (No, masturbation doesn't help; vibrators aren't cuddly and don't give good conversation.) I know having a healthy sex drive is supposed to be a sign of good health, but I'm beginning to feel physically imbalanced. Spontaneous combustion seems imminent. Help!

A: Time-honored methods of reducing sexual tension are cold showers and sublimations like vigorous physical exertion. I don't know about you, but neither of those sounds appealing to me. Lack of sex is not a fatal condition, though. Hugging friends, sleeping with a stuffed or real animal, and social dancing all put more cuddles in your life. Good conversation, while sometimes more difficult to secure than a good fuck, is often available from a wider array of sources (like married friends or those of different sexual orientation). Vibrators provide only what they are designed for — reliable orgasms; but when one is sexually frustrated reliable orgasms are not "merely" items. Miss the chase? Flirt. Miss intimacy? Turn to your friends or family. Miss being valued? Look into volunteering. While nothing beats a good toss and tickle with a likable playmate, many of the things you're now missing in your life are available without a sex partner. If you are meeting your other wants and needs somewhat, when you do run into a sexual possibility you are unlikely to appear (or be) so needy, a most unattractive and desire-dampening quality.

Q: As a woman who enjoys watching the better-quality adult movies, I am becoming more puzzled over the fact that most of the male actors' penises never really become fully erect, in many cases even when they ejaculate. I have had several boyfriends over the years, and not one of them was less than turgid as a tree after this kind of stimulation. Is this some phenomenon known to actors in this business?

A: Turgid as a tree? All of them? Really? As Miss Manners might say, "How nice for you." There are a number of reasons why any particular erection might not be at maximum fullness. What you see might be the natural erection for that man (turgid as a tree is at one end of a normal spectrum, mushy as marsh moss is at the other), or the natural erection for that man at this age (younger men tend to be harder, though not always) or that man under these particular circumstances (long-delayed ejaculation, or not his first go-round, or with 17 people standing around wishing he would hurry up and finish so they can quit filming and go home).

Q: A discussion about milking cows led to yet another mystery of the human body: Why in the world do men have nipples? A childhood friend once tried to convince me that while his mother's gave milk, from his father's came juice. Is this true?

A: Sure. Pale-skinned fathers produce light juices like apple, and darker-skinned fathers, richer juices like grape. Now, would you be interested in purchasing some beach-front property in Utah? As for the why of male nipples, all humans begin as female. Prebirth hormones create the differentiation into males — labia into scrotum, clitoris into penis. So men's nipples, then, are nature's tender little mementos of what might have been.

Q: My girlfriend is really great at performing oral sex ... until the last seconds before my orgasm. She acts like I'm going to shoot venom or something and will have no contact whatsoever with my semen. I know it's not due to fear of AIDS; we've been faithful to each other for many years and have unprotected intercourse regularly. My closest friends say their partners kiss, lick, and suck them for several minutes after they have orgasms. I'm so envious. Is this something that women like to do, or is it really gross for them and they just do it to please their man?

A: For some it is, for some it isn't, for some sometimes one, the other, or both. For the answer that most concerns you, ask your girlfriend.

Note: Are you a BMOC? A BWA (big woman at work)? A leader of human beings in any capacity? Every year National Condom Week by happy coincidence begins on Valentine's Day. If you would like to organize some special fun function or educational event in your circle next February, the Men's Support Center (P.O. Box 30564, Oakland, CA 94604) puts out a National Condom Week Organizer Kit, which is a guide for planning, funding, and publicizing local Condom Week events. The cost is $20, including samples. ●

SLOW ME DOWN, LORD

BY JANET HAZEN

URBAN, INDUSTRIAL, and hip, the Slow Club moved into the North Mission at just the right time in the perfect spot: The new offices of KQED are a block away, the Bay Guardian is a few doors down, and the Muni bus yard is located right across the street. Lunch is a guaranteed success, and indeed, the Slow Club is full every workday during lunch hours. But it wasn't until my third visit that I was convinced there was any serious food going on here.

At night the slate-gray, silver, and black hi-tech interior takes on an East Village sort of ambience. Dim lighting, an eclectic variety of lounge lizards at the back bar, a somewhat smoky room, and casual service make the Slow Club a great hangout for locals, but also a viable place to eat a rewarding dinner.

Our service was fine one evening at dinnertime, but on two other occasions I was convinced the establishment was doing everything possible to live up to its name. Inattentive service isn't hip, nor is it appropriate — no matter how casual or "avant-garde" a restaurant wants to be. Happily, one of our servers had just started and promises to be a charming and well-informed server. (Maybe she could re-train the day shift.)

An antipasta plate ($7.95) one night comprised a roasted, silky smooth pimiento and roasted long green chilies on a pool of tomato sauce, grilled eggplant with charred skin and a creamy interior, sliced fresh mozzarella, and several fresh croutons. Each component was expertly prepared, distinct, and delicious.

Pizza ($6.50), made with a slightly sweet dough, was refreshing and light. Rather than the ultra-thin crisp crust that we see so often, the Slow Club pizza is made with a fairly thick dough that puffs out around the edges and remains flat in the middle where the toppings weigh it down. This night the pizza ingredients included slices of smoky, flavorful grilled eggplant, mozzarella, and fresh yellow tomatoes.

The pasta ($8) was divine — sensitive and delicate but oozing with good flavors and excellent ingredients. Nicely sautéed chanterelle mushrooms and toasted pine nuts tossed with perfectly cooked pasta were enough to make this simple pasta dish rich and inviting.

A comforting plate of braised lamb shank served atop creamy polenta ($10.50) was also flawless. The meat was slowly cooked in a robust liquid spiked with just the right amount of herbs, garlic, and garbanzo beans until it was tender enough to fall from the bone. A slab of cold butternut squash and a fingerling potato weren't necessary on this plate, but certainly added sustenance for the extra-hungry.

Fresh figs served in their ruby-red poaching liquid ($4) were garnished with candied walnuts and crème fraîche, and made a sumptuous and natural finale to our meal.

We sat at a sidewalk table at lunch one day and enjoyed the social urban setting and view of Muni buses. We had to retrieve our own drinks from the back bar, and getting our food on time while seated six inches from the front door was strained, to say the least.

Caesar salad ($5.95) at the Slow Club is prepared with whole leaves of romaine dressed with a tasty vinaigrette and dusted with grated cheese. Crunchy croutons added character, but the too-thin dressing and outer leaves of lettuce made for a forgettable salad. A vegetarian black bean soup ($3.25/bowl) composed of tender, plump beans, bits of fresh tomato, and more than a dash of cumin had a round and balanced flavor.

The turkey burger ($5.95) is a complete plate. A small tumble of mixed baby greens, a slice of yellow tomato, pickled peppers, and superb french fries combined with a fairly juicy burger and an exemplary whole-wheat seeded bun make this an outstanding lunch.

A special salad made with bowtie pasta, ricotta cheese, and toasted walnuts ($4.50) was simple and subtly flavored. The primary flavor of fresh garlic was stimulating, but the addition of a few fresh seasonal vegetables or herbs like tomatoes, summer squash, or basil would have improved this pasta salad and added some color.

With our coffee drinks, we enjoyed a fine chocolate chip cookie and a filled confection made with an excellent orange peel-scented dough.

The Slow Club is a welcome addition to the neighborhood; however, I would like to see more attention paid to the service. Our food at dinnertime was clearly prepared by one who understands food and combining flavors — we were delighted with all our choices. While the menu is small at the Slow Club, I think most folks would rather have a smaller number of well-prepared items to choose from rather than a staggering amount of ill-conceived or poorly made food. Stop by this corner spot next time you're in the mood for a few cocktails, some hearty food, low prices, and a little Mission District culture. ●

Halloween 1992

Not just another
Saturday night

BY SUSAN EVANS

HOWL AT THE MOON, gorge on minicandy bars, and shake your money-maker to the wee hours. It's Halloween, it's Saturday, and there's no excuse for spending it on the couch. Halloween gives San Franciscans the unique opportunity to make real all the stereotypes of our fair city. On Halloween, we can embrace our outrageousness and act out those scary dreams that keep Pat Buchanan in a frothy bother. This is kind of a civic responsibility, so read on and find out where, when, and how you can make your contribution.

Castro Street Halloween Party Touted as the largest public event in San Francisco, this celebration assembles nearly 300,000 people. It is one serious party. Ten blocks are cordoned off, while freaky people wander, carouse, and literally dance in the streets at Noe and Market. It's a chance to take your skeletons out of the closet and celebrate them. Once you cross the barricades, you have entered a totally Other World. The Sisters of Perpetual Indulgence will be collecting $1 donations for AIDS and other nonprofit organizations. This year, the street party is going back to its roots and sponsoring a children's celebration and parade from 4 to 6 p.m. The grownups will be prowling around after 8. Sat/31, 8-midnight, Castro/Market area, SF. $1.

Dia de los Muertos Benefit Dance The Day of the Dead is a day of celebrating our departed loved ones and partying down in their memory. Live music from more than 10 bands will resound off the halls of Fort Mason's Herbst Pavilion from 7 p.m. till midnight. The Mission Economic Cultural Center is sponsoring the costume/dance party and also holding a Frida Kahlo look-alike contest. Sat/31, Fort Mason, Herbst Pavilion, Buchanan and Marina, SF. $12 advance, $15 at the door. Information: (415) 826-1401.

Halloween Horror Marathon All day and all night, monster, chiller, horror films will be flickering away at the Roxie on Halloween. This is where the real cavern-dwelling vampires will be spending the day. Late-night horror TV never looked this good. The marathon of eight films starts off with the classic The Amazing Mr. X, followed by The Vampire's Ghost, The Lady and the Monster, Horror Hotel, Blood of Dracula, I Was a Teenage Werewolf, House on Haunted Hill, and, finally, Spider Baby. Don't look in the aisle behind you. Sat/31, Roxie Cinema, 3117 16th St., SF. Movies start at 1 p.m. and run till 12:30 a.m. Information: (415) 431-3611.

Fags Au Naturel Experience the first Queer Nude Masked Rave where coming naked will get you $5 off admission at the door. Shake your hallowed weenie, contact the spirits with the aid of a fortune teller, and carve a pumpkin. Of course, there's not going to be a costume party, but there will be a Masked Man Contest. Thurs/29, 9 p.m.-3 a.m., 150 Folsom, SF. $15 nude, $20 attired. Information: (415) 826-3738.

Halloween Surf & Instrumental Madness The Ultras, who front a surf-pop-sludge sound, will be playing with the ghoulish girl band the BOO!

Paint It Black

Assessing the next wave of horror fiction

BY DWIGHT GARNER

IT'S A DARK and stormy night. (Cue in scary organ riffs.) Beasts crash through the underbrush, trailing slime tracks of blood and gristle. A virginal young woman, sobbing exquisitely, may or may not be rescued in time....

Or so went the plots in the skeezy horror paperbacks my friends and I, during grade school, tucked behind our propped-up textbooks. These were the bookish equivalent of White Castle burgers — hot, greasy, perfectly addictive.

For readers with a taste for horror, the genre's appeal often resides less in its formulas than in its formality. Horror prose tends to have calm, but-toned-down cadences, and its notable practitioners, from Mary Shelley on down the line, know how to pluck one or two bass notes and let the reverberations settle.

Stephen King, our most popular horrormeister, understands this necessary formality, but — love him or loathe him — he gives it a healthy spanking. King has uncanny pop-culture sensibilities; his prose is full of stray moonshines, and he knows how to casually plagiarize a good line — “What do you see when you turn out the light? I can't tell you, but I know it's mine” — and employ it to decently comic effect.

King has hacked out a zigzagging trail for today's new breed of horror writers, and here they are, banging at his wrought-iron gates. Expect to hear plenty in the next few months about Poppy Z. Brite and Lewis Gannett, a pair of first novelists. Gannett's rangy The Living One (Random House, $20), an Oedipal, homoerotic Invasion of the Body Snatchers, won't be out until the beginning of the year. But Brite's first novel has arrived to hosannas from the Blood N' Roses crowd. With Halloween just around the corner, her book is worth a look.

The critic Lionel Trilling, in his famous defense of Lolita, praised the book for putting its lovers where “lovers in literature must be put, beyond the pale of society.” In her furiously purple novel, Lost Souls (Abyss/Delacorte, $18), 25-year-old Brite does her best to shove her young lovers so far beyond society's pale that not even she can throw them a rope. Brite has written a frankly homoerotic novel about a punky narcissistic band of young vampires who are so glam they're like rejects from a Cure video.

The operative word here is vamp: These trendy bloodsuckers smear on the eyeshadow, loiter in loud bars, steer clear of sunlight, outfit themselves in boho black so that “dark red stains” won't be a problem, groove on David Bowie, stay young and pretty for hundreds of years, and tend to rip out the throats of casual acquaintances.

They're rebels with 'tudes.

What's likely to win Lost Souls a wide following among disaffected teens is Brite's easy familiarity with Mope Culture. The book's protagonist is an alienated young suburbanite named Jason (his funk is explained later, when he discovers he's a displaced vampire named Nothing) who's absorbed every pained nuance of Sylvia Plath and Dylan Thomas. His mental sound track throbs with the dark syncopations of Bauhaus, the Cure, Tom Waits, and the Cramps. Not happy pumpkins.

That Brite's young vampire has a thing for Sylvia Plath doesn't seem an accident. Lost Souls quite often seems a bit like a rotted-out version of The Bell Jar, that autumnal cathartic weeper. Brite — who's no Sylvia Plath, at least not yet — tries too hard to be literary; her bookish references are pretty facile and strained. (One character drinks cheapo wine called White Horse because “Dylan Thomas had drunk his last eighteen whiskeys at a pub called the White Horse”). Worse, her idea of forceful prose is to get cadences rolling until you want to cry uncle:

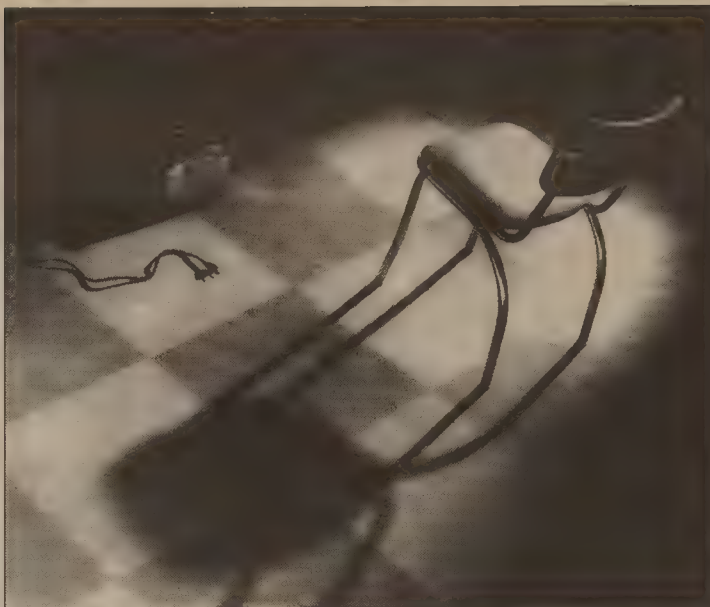

He couldn't stand to see that smile on the lips he knew so well, the lips he had nudged open with his tongue, the lips that had brought him to the forbidden zone between pleasure and madness. The betraying lips....

And so on, until you want to zip Brite's lips.

She's more successful handling the book's erotic undercurrent — call it a blood-ripe mood indigo — which is never far from the surface. For one thing, she conspires to give the book a weird Oedipal spin: Nothing unknowingly kills his mortal mother and fucks his vampire father. For another, there's so much sucking and licking and nipping and nuzzling in Lost Souls that often you can't tell which scenes are about sex and which are about murder and you understand that Brite wants it exactly that way:

[Christian] slipped one hand beneath the belt of the boy's jeans and found molten trembling heat there. The boy's back arched; he made a low gasping sound. Christian's tongue found the tender spot under the jaw, and he sank his teeth in. The boy whimpered and went rigid in his arms. The raw yolky taste of life spilled into Christian's mouth, bubbling out of the boy fresh and strong.

Brite delivers the heat, and as genre works go, Lost Souls is often potent stuff. Brite also displays a knack for keeping three or four plot threads moving briskly and then tying them up with some panache — no mean feat. But if she wants to be taken seriously outside the horror and teeny-bopper sets, she's going to have to get smarter and to be a little less touchy-feely and precious, a little more ironic, wild, shrewd. Whether she can do it will be one of the more interesting questions — perhaps the only interesting question — horror will have to offer in the '90s. ●

"I'm free from pain... the BackPax Medical Center gave me the courage to work past the pain, to take the stresses in my life and turn them into positives. Thank you, BackPax!"

BackPax Medical Center

A Physician's Office
1801 Bush St. • San Francisco

You don't need to have BACK PAIN!

Just ask BackPax graduate Giulio Colombo. Giulio is just one example of success through participation in the BackPax program.

Pax Beale, the founder, suffered from the pain of ruptured and herniated discs. In search of relief he tried over 70 different types of treatments - chiropractic, acupuncture, physical therapy, even rolfing, but nothing lasted.

Pax had been an athlete. He swam to Alcatraz, ran the Bay to Breakers and played college football - but the pain finally became so bad he couldn't even get out of bed. He was scheduled for a quadruple fusion and a triple laminectomy of the spine - heavy duty surgery. He never had it. Instead, using his 27 years experience in medical administration and working with orthopedists, he developed the BackPax system and he's been pain free ever since.

Today, the BackPax Medical Center helps others achieve that same pain free lifestyle. Control and management are the keys to the system. BackPax helps you break the cycle of endless treatments and office visits and bouncing from one cycle of treatments to another. BackPax shows you how to take control of your back pain. It's fun and it works!

17TH ANNUAL S.F. OPEN STUDIOS KICKS OFF THIS WEEKEND

BY HARRY ROCHE

ARTISTS DON'T GET much respect. The disdain doesn't come only from right-wing ideologues like Jesse Helms and Pat Buchanan: Tell someone you're an artist and you're likely to hear, "Oh, that's interesting. But what do you really do?" This response is based on several assumptions: (1) Art is not work, but a frivolous pastime; (2) art has no intrinsic value and should not be taken seriously unless it can be turned into a commodity and sold on the open market for big bucks; and (3) starving artist is a romantic term.

But just as the general public has been inculcated to view artists as dubious characters, the unwashed hordes aren't much more welcome in the inner sanctum of the art world. Not everyone is invited to the party. You probably won't be tossed into the street should you venture inside these hallowed spaces, but unless you reek of new money (or exude the right type of chic), you can be made to feel uncomfortable. Unfortunately, this elitist air doesn't waft only through the commercial clearinghouses around Union Square; the snob factor is just as palpable in many so-called alternative art spaces south of Market. New-wave narcissism can be as off-putting as old-style outsiderism.

What's a poor art lover to do? Take a vow of aesthetic chastity? Of course not. It's San Francisco Open Studios to the rescue! Once a year, the walls come tumbling down around the art world's well-guarded citadels. This year, Open Studios turns 17, and over the course of the next three weekends, a record number (600) of San Francisco artists will invite you into their studios (East Studios, Oct. 31–Nov. 1; West Studios, Nov. 7–8; Hunters Point Shipyard Studios, Nov. 14–15). A primary function of Open Studios has always been to break down the barriers between artists and the general public and to help spark a dialogue. As in past years, 1992 Open Studios affords a marvelous opportunity to meet artists on common ground, far removed from the frenzied hobnobbing of a gallery opening.

That's right: A gallery opening isn't the ideal setting in which to immerse oneself in art. In fact, Open Studios and a typical gallery opening offer a glaring study in contrasts. On the whole, openings tend to be tension-filled, crowded, noisy affairs with a discernible pecking order that often puts the artist a few rungs beneath the gallery director and certain collectors.

During Open Studios, on the other hand, you'll get to see the artist with his or her hair down in a relaxed, informal setting. Away from the three-ring circus of an opening, most artists are down-to-earth folks who are not only gracious hosts, but are eager to answer questions and discuss their work. And, of course, they would desperately like to sell something.

Open Studios gives a glimmer of what a magical and messy business art is. Contrary to popular belief, most artists don't go through life with a muse by their side. For every ounce of inspiration, there are buckets of sweat and tears. And while the work itself might not be seen in the best light amid the clutter and paraphernalia of an artist's studio, you'll gain valuable insight into the creative process. Only then can you really begin to appreciate just what goes into a "work" of art.

Open Studios is an egalitarian enterprise. Because it's totally unjuried and uncensored, any San Francisco artist can participate as long as he or she can cough up the $50–$70 registration fee. This means, of course, that you run into the good, the bad, and the mediocre, but this is all part of the fun: You never know what hidden treasures may lie moldering in obscurity in some remote corner of the city.

DEAR EAST BAY MUD CUSTOMERS:

For more than 60 years, the East Bay Municipal Utility District has enjoyed exceptionally high quality Sierra water, based on rights obtained on the Mokelumne River in the 1920s and expanded in the 1950s.

A re-evaluation of EBMUD's historic water rights begins November 9, when the State Water Resources Control Board will consider water allocations for Mokelumne fisheries. Some of the changes being considered include such high flows for fish that rationing or reduction of water quality for our customers would be required about every other year in the future. Other pending agency proceedings and legal challenges could have similar outcomes for the communities we serve.

EBMUD is committed to protection of the environment, and has developed programs that could improve conditions for the Mokelumne River fisheries while meeting the water supply needs of EBMUD's customers. As one component of these programs, EBMUD will propose to the State Board an increase in stream flows of nearly 50 percent in drought years, and of 500 percent or more in other years.

For the protection of our citizens' public health, EBMUD should continue providing water from a high-quality source, with the lowest possible health risk and the ability to meet increasingly stringent federal drinking-water regulations. EBMUD provides this high-quality water at reasonable rates. Many families with low or fixed-incomes could not afford major increases in EBMUD rates to pay for expensive treatment of a lower quality water supply, nor could they afford to purchase bottled water. In addition, a reliable water supply is essential to the vitality of the East Bay's business economy.

Under guidance of our Board of Directors, EBMUD is taking a balanced approach to long-term water supply planning. EBMUD has asked the State Water Resources Control Board to affirm our water rights, our proposals for protection of the Mokelumne River ecosystem, and our extensive work to meet both urban and environmental needs. If you would like to help, please call our Community Affairs Office at 287-0138 for more information.

Thank you.

DAZZLED BY DIVAS

BY DANYEL SMITH

LIKE MIKI HOWARD's and Sade's new albums because, No. 1, they both can sing their asses off. No. 2, they have enough inner power, enough confidence, to be sexual on their own terms. And No. 3, they don't have to talk, as even some of my favorite female rappers do, about being the way they are. They just are.

In the video for Sade's new single, "No Ordinary Love," she is a mermaid, legs seared together under a big, pretty tail. She is sitting on a stone, under special FX water; her hair is loose and flowing, freed from her usual severe ponytail or bun. She is the picture of relaxed self-possession, of soft, slim, full-lipped beauty.

As mermaids do, Sade is singing about her sailor, missing him, wishing him back in the cool bluish water, where her tail doesn't matter. But her seaman is up in the city somewhere, or maybe he isn't, but Sade starts looking through an old fashion magazine and then begins sewing for herself, with a needle and thread, a gauzy wedding skirt and veil.

Then somehow she is on land, with legs in place of her tail, and she is running through town, more showing herself like a beacon than actually looking for her sailor, wanting and being ready for him, should he see her. She runs and runs and then finds herself back at the dock, back by the water, and she sits and pours water on her toes — they are dirty and hurting after her barefoot romp through Video Urban Wherever. She has been throwing rice on herself the whole time, tossing dry, marital rice, having her own desperate celebration of love without even having found her sailor. The image is spectacular and telling; it is a sophisticated picture illustrating a pretty but prosaic love song. Sade appears confused but strong, feminine and feminist, desperate but not crazy.

Just as she did on her previous albums ("Is It a Crime" can still make me cry, rings with quiet honesty, even five years later) Sade has crossed big-time "quiet storm" pop with old-time blues. She has merged Then with Now and has infused the girl side of '90s heterosexual love with neo-diva contradictions. Her imagery isn't pulled from real life, but her sentiment is. Sade takes love and makes it simple, clear, and sad, while it also remains complicated, hazy, and electrifying. She writes songs like Angela Bofill used to (think of Bofill's "I Try" and "This Time I'll Be Sweeter"), frank songs that have no fear of weakness, songs that render profane all the self-deception, posing, and manipulation that go along with even the deepest, truest of loves. The phrase "All bull-shit aside..." could easily be the preamble to almost every one of her verses. Achy, but not fragile, you know?

Strength without bitterness is what makes both Sade's and Miki Howard's new albums, Love Deluxe and Femme Fatale, respectively, soar above the rest — the new Neneh Cherry and forthcoming Anita Baker notwithstanding. Miki Howard's single "Ain't Nobody Like You" (written by LeMel Humes) is ecstatic — she is thrilled in her sadness and anger, happy that she can feel what she's feeling even if she's not feeling good. The numbness is gone, and that's cause enough for her to have a bluesy party with herself. The song, with its plaintive background vocals and buoyant keyboards, perfectly meshes glee with grief.

In her video for the song, she is many women: a feminine/mannish beauty in suspenders, a lush Billie Holiday (she portrays Holiday in Spike Lee's X), and a cleavage-displaying "femme fatale." She's stunning in a way I think is cool, in a way that acknowledges me as much as it does any man. She has other songs on the album — a rich rendition of Holiday's "Good Morning Heartache" and Howard's own baldly reminiscent "Cigarette Ashes on the Floor" — that hark back to some earlier time, but "Ain't Nobody Like You" reverberates with sassy nowness, with pop catchiness — it is a shot in R&B's arm, a new anthem for divadom.

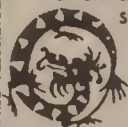

Watching Howard's and Sade's videos back-to-back (it's done all the time on BET) is mesmerizing. Their beauty is pungent, almost overwhelming, their singles are each moving, their voices both incredible. I like being able to see beauty and not be alienated or intimidated (as I am when I see En Vogue, or the girls in Wrecks N Effect's new video). I know I'm supposed to be serenely assured and above female vs. female competition, but the real world is the real world. I guess I'm just a cornball who likes divas of substance, one who feels as if she can compete with that, and can't compete with breasts and ass just for the sake of breasts and ass. ●

Firing line: Tim Roth and Harvey Keitel in Reservoir Dogs.

STEALER'S WHEEL

RESERVOIR DOGS. DIRECTED BY QUENTIN TARANTINO. OPENS FRI/30 AT THE LUMIERE, SF; UA, BERK.; EMERYBAY, EMERYVILLE.

BY CHUCK STEPHENS

Reservoir Dogs, writer-director Quentin Tarantino's jaw-dropping, blood-drenched debut, is such an exhilarating instant classic that it seems to ricochet from the screen. Pinging and caroming off the surfaces of a zillion pulp rhapsodies and murky urban nocturnes, the film slows down like a cartoon bullet to let you admire its reference-etched detail, then speeds up and slams into your brain. Packed with achingly funny dialogue and relentlessly ferocious set pieces, Reservoir Dogs offers poetic mayhem at its zenith: a dizzying combination of noir-laureate Jim Thompson's thug vernacular and Martin Scorsese's brute reflex.

Vividly revisiting heist-gone-wrong movies past—Kubrick's 1956 The Killing is a crucial touchstone—Dogs' elliptical narrative washes and eddies over the events surrounding a bungled jewelry caper. One by one, a crew of underworld "professionals"—identically dressed in black suits, white shirts, and skinny ties, looking as if they'd raided the costume locker from the Rat Pack classic Ocean's 11, then slept in their clothes—assemble at their warehouse meet-safe to suss out what went wrong with the job. That each member has been assigned a color-coded moniker—in an effort to prevent them from giving one another up in the event any individual is busted—ensures that the gang is primed for the rash of violent paranoia that descends when one member is revealed as a sadistic psychopath and everyone begins to suspect that they've been betrayed by a "rat in the house."

Yakking like a chorus of jail-yard bards, Tarantino's characters turn each juicy line of the film's nonstop dialogue as if it were their last: An agitated Mr. Pink (Steve Buscemi) wonders, "Where's the commode in this dungeon?" while an impatient Mr. White (Harvey Keitel) cancels another crook's snide monologue with an acid "hardy-fuckin'-har." The terse, inspired script clearly worked its black magic on the film's cast: a dynamite, all-male ensemble that makes indelible use of the lovably doughty Michael Madsen, and believably posits a skeezy Chris Penn as a loving son to venerable tough guy/giant Lawrence Tierney (looking like a cross between Ben Grimm and Jabba the Hut). Every member's perfectly nuanced delivery makes the script's cavalcade of hard-boiled bons mots sing like one of the forgotten '70s radio hits that stud the film's irresistible sound track.

And, oh, that sound track. Hearing the lilting caresses of George Baker Selection's "Little Green Bag" or the massive oooga-chakas of Blue Swede's "Hooked on a Feeling" in the context of Reservoir Dogs' demented antics is like bearing witness to an epiphany. But what Tarantino does with the old Stealer's Wheel nugget, "Stuck in the Middle with You," during the film's riveting central episode will stay in your mind for days after you've left the theater. Both horrific and orgasmic, the scene is at once an endurance test, the film's dramatic crux, and an essential key to appreciating the director's darkly ironic aesthetic.

While the twists and turns of Reservoir Dogs' convoluted plot sustain an inexorable momentum all their own, the film makes for an equally compelling essay on the semiotic vagary of pop culture in general, and the crime film in detail. From its giddy pre-credit sequence—in which the crew engages in a "close reading" of Madonna's "Like a Virgin" while the camera lurks around behind them, eager to get inside their heads—to the film's welter of code systems ("cops" vs. "real people," "daddies" and "juniors," Dillingers, Berettas, and Lee Marvins, to name only a few), Dogs' richest booty is the media-saturated double meaning every character, every action, and every spoken line seems to assume.

Still, as literate and self-conscious as this film is, it's also the most delightfully spine-jarring action powerhouse I've seen since I can't remember when. Somewhere between the genre-pretzels of the great Jean-Pierre Melville (talk about a director ripe for rediscovery) and the multi-barreled blow-outs of John Woo (whose second American film Tarantino is in the process of writing), Reservoir Dogs reaffirms the crime thriller as the American cinematic mode par excellence. There is nothing to inflame even the most avid partisans, but there is more than enough to move the feelings and engage the spirit. Adams' choral writing is clear and sonorous. It is a very sensuous score, luxuriating in the harmony and orchestration. Sellars' production is striking, brilliantly integrated and thought through.

ICARUS, BABEL, AND BIRDS

THE FALLS. DIRECTED BY PETER GREENAWAY. FRU30-SUN/1 AT THE CASTRO, SF.

By HEATHER MACKEY

PETER GREENAWAY'S The Falls is a subversive pseudo-documentary, an infuriating joke, a voyeuristic excursion through a phantom biographical directory, and a tangled retelling of two old tales — of Icarus, who flew too close to the sun and fell into the sea; and of the Tower of Babel, which caused the multiplication of languages.

The film, which kicks off a weeklong Greenaway retrospective at the Castro, is also a key to later Greenaway films. Here are the framing devices we see later in The Draughtsman's Contract, and the numerical games of Drowning by Numbers and Prospero's Books, which play off the tension between structure and content. Here are the obsessions with the physical body (Belly of an Architect), and the recreation on film of paintings and painterly tableaux (The Cook, the Thief, His Wife, and Her Lover, along with just about every movie Greenaway's made). There are even three Cissy Colpitts in The Falls, antecedents to the fetching murderesses of Drowning by Numbers.

The Falls is a series of short biographies of 92 people whose last names all begin with the letters F-A-L-L. The 92 are a handful of victims of a worldwide disaster that has something to do with birds. They've been singled out for examination by a bureaucratic commission studying the Violent Unknown Event (VUE for short), an apocalyptic upheaval that happened in the never-specified past, and yet never happened. Somewhere around victim 88 or 90, as the film passes the three-hour mark, our suspicions are confirmed — if the Violent Unknown Event hadn't occurred, one narrator admits, it could have been invented.

"Real" or not, the VUE's effects are protean: People develop bizarre ornithological obsessions; they die tragically after jumping from heights; they undergo strange psychological changes; they develop opinions as to "the responsibility of birds"; and they start speaking a virtual Babel of languages. Some of the "known VUE languages" foster ambiguity; some are characterized by excessive saliva; significantly, one is characterized by a vocabulary that is constantly shifting in meaning.

This — and much, much more — is thoroughly, relentlessly catalogued by the film's narrators. A spoof of the BBC, and a close cousin to the best Monty Python skits, the script of their narration is filled with deadpan non sequiturs: "Whatever her other attributes, Lacer Fallacel has not been able to teach her dogs to fly"; or, "The VUE had given Bwythan Fallabutus a foot disease that shredded his toenails. He could drink salt water without harm, but he felt listless and debilitated away from the influence of chlorophyll." Fun stuff. But after, say, the first 10 Falls — when it becomes clear that Greenaway really does intend to take us all the way to 92 — it's impossible not to feel a small panic. Like it's the noon rush and you've just taken a number in Kafka's Deli. But as in all endurance contests, the effort involved eventually results in an endorphin release. The film becomes hypnotic, insinuating, timeless — like house music for the eyes.

The length of the film — like everything else about it — underscores its cleverness. Why 92 Falls? Or, more to the point, why three hours? Perhaps because that's the only way to break through long-held suppositions about a film's form being somehow attached to its meaning. The Falls is filled with red herrings, not the least of them the "cues" by which we recognize cinematic styles: Are there talking-head shots? Interviews? It must be a documentary.

Of course, The Falls is a fake documentary, a carefully crafted replicant (and all the Blade Runner menace of the term applies) with a very different agenda powering it up. The charts and diagrams, the insistence on certain facts, the interviews and biological flotsam add up to something much different from "proof" or synthesis. In fact, quite the opposite — the end result is entropy. The film therefore is a wolf in sheep's clothing. Or rather, a fox — after FOX, the shadowy society For Ornithological eXtermination that plays CHAOS to the VUE commission's CONTROL.

For all this, the images in the movie are charmingly "normal." In fact, it's tempting to imagine that Greenaway compiled the footage first and imposed the narrative later. Certainly, there's nothing in these standard (though well-executed) shots of water, cloud formations, cars speeding down a highway, people talking into microphones or sitting staring out the window to suggest the cataclysmic upheaval of the Violent Unknown Event. The images are beautiful, quotidian, arbitrary, ridiculous — and beautifully framed: A bathtub fills up with water; a man watches in a dark room, turning toward the camera to intone the names of different species of birds; a naked woman reads aloud; and clouds scud across the sky. ●

CANDYMAN

"Look in the mirror, call his name five times, and Candyman will appear," goes the legend. To University of Chicago grad student Virginia Madsen, who's investigating urban myths for a thesis, the invitation's irresistible. She and partner Kasi Lemmons arrive at the crime-ridden housing project where Candyman supposedly haunts and murders, and Madsen's crawling investigation through its rotting walls is of the screaming, "Don't-go-through-that-door!" variety. Meanwhile, her nincompoop of a professor husband, Xander Berkeley, is liaising with one of his students, but Madsen's more concerned with the project's single mother, Vanessa Williams, who's afraid for her baby's life, and mirror-rendezvousing with Candyman. There's gore galore and squalor to spare, but with intelligence to match in both Madsen's performance and Bernard Rose's direction, so that though Tony Todd's imposing Candyman's never sweet, the movie crystallizes into a more-than-a-cut-above-the-genre goody. (Alexandria, SF; Century, Oakl.)

STORYVILLE

Here we are, back again with sex, lies, and videotape (i.e., politics), but with a far less interesting James Spader. He's an all-but-expressionless lawyer who looks like a thinner, younger Clinton as he announces he's going to run for Congress. Since he stems from three generations of politically powerful New Orleanians and has not-so-politic power broker Jason Robards for an uncle, why not? But then he goes home with a pretty Vietnamese girl and hops into her hot tub as an unseen videocamera records the heated moments. Movie mayhem sets in as Mark Frost's movie dives dully into the diluted waters of Spader's father's suicide; there's a murder that has Spader representing the suspect in court where prosecuting attorney Joanne Whalley Kilmer's also his ex-girlfriend; his ex-wife and her problems are dragged in (no, the movie's not X-rated), plus some questionable family oil rights — and that's just for starters! What's Storyville? By this time, who cares? (Clay, SF)

UNDER SIEGE

Only 30 terrorists against Steven Seagal this time? Is our hero slipping? No way, and let's face it, without such odds there'd be no movie. Seagal's now a cook, ending his Navy career aboard the USS Missouri, also on its retiring run. But there's a plot being cooked on the back burner by disaffected CIA operative/scene stealer Tommy Lee Jones and double-crossing Cmdr. Gary Busey to steal the ship's nuclear arsenal. Pretending to provide entertainment for the captain's birthday, they helicopter in said 30 massively armed terrorists, plus Playboy centerfold Erika Eleniac, who's to be the birthday cheesecake. Never mind that they seal chef Seagal up in a meat locker, because before you can say "minute steak," he's hammed his way out and given the poor lambs a lot to beef about via bombs and grenades. The violence and action are awesome, as Andrew Davis' anything-but-understated movie makes Under Siege the most underscored action overkill undertaking around. From America's unrivaled queen of flamenco comes the sensual energy and fiery excitement of pure Spanish dance. New York magazine, comparing her to other great dancers, writes that "Benitez performing flamenco is akin to the Martha Graham of Clytemnestra and to Ulanova as the dying swan... She conveys not simply physical sensation but a series of almost unnameable moods—from dark to dazzling."

They can destroy your confidence, your relationships, your life.

In a lonely place: Charo Toledo as Nino.

NOTHING MISSING

DANCING WITH THE MISSING. BY ROY CONBOY. DIRECTED BY ROBERTO GUTIERREZ. PRODUCED BY TEATRO DE LA ESPERANZA. MISSION CULTURAL CENTER, 2868 MISSION, SF. THROUGH NOV. 8.

By ELLIOTT SMITH

DANCING WITH THE MISSING is a departure for El Teatro de la Esperanza. Its forte to date has been slice-of-life dramas or agit-farces in the Mime Troupe mode: Dancing is neither. Instead, playwright Roy Conboy gives us a stylish L.A. noir — with a few twists.

For one thing, the tough-talking loner at the center of the play is a woman (Charo Toledo), though she's androgynous both in her name, Nino, and in her look (her vintage double-breasted suit, like all the costumes, is by Dolores Rivera). For another, although the play is set in the present, it's filled with references to the pulp detective stories of the '30s and '40s. The anachronisms — hip flasks and cigarette cases, Nino's Chandleresque narration, allusions to The Maltese Falcon — work to highlight our sense of dislocation.

And Conboy knows that parodies of the detective genre have themselves become a genre. He uses pulp convention (plus a touch of magic realism), but his real subject is the way that totalitarian power distorts ordinary lives. With references to death squads, torture, and the desaparecidos, Conboy's after a bigger target than noir's typical big-city corruption.

A mysterious woman (Hallie Fraser) hires Nino to recover her child, apparently abducted five years ago in an unnamed Latin American country by a shadowy organization called Las Mujeres de Sangre. Of course, nothing is quite as it seems. The smooth-talking big shot Estrada (Eduardo Robledo) who guides Nino's investigation is himself pretty suspicious, and the women she questions (played by Dolores Rivera, Luz de la Riva, Amelia Schumacher, Viola Lucero, and Lisa Cortez Walden) start turning up shoeless and dead. Director Roberto Gutierrez Varea keeps us off balance; our allegiances are unclear through much of the play. Even Nino is an unlikely hero: A bill-collection agent, she's cold, avaricious, and apolitical (at least at the play's start). This ambiguity is unusual (and welcome) from a theater of the Left.

Another unusual element is the play's striking design. Leftist theaters have long been suspicious of style (thinking perhaps that it masks truth) and often too impoverished for glossy production values. But Dancing looks and sounds great: Charles Neifeld's handsome sets, the exaggerated angles and shadows of David Thayer's lighting, and Oriol Galofre's terrific cool-jazz sound track make this the most richly atmospheric Esperanza production I've seen.

Conboy doesn't quite maintain the play's hard-boiled edge to the end. Once we get a step ahead of Nino, we stay there — she's a little slow to grasp the strands of the web in which she's entangled. The theme of Nino's coming to terms with her heritage never really develops, because we're never quite sure why shame over her housekeeper mother leads her to deny her Latina identity so emphatically in the first place. And, as in real life, no easy or satisfying resolution is possible. But this production — with its dark, ambiguous script and its ravishing design — is a bold step for Esperanza. ●

SADDLE NOOSE

"People just know what they're doing," says one of the characters in Peggy Lee Howe's Saddle Noose. Or as Freud would say, there are no accidents: When we thwart ourselves at every turn, make bad choices, and shrink from freedom, we're doing exactly what we truly want.

Saddle Noose is set in an unspecified town out on the plains. But the landscape the characters inhabit isn't one of vertigo-inducing open spaces, but of shabby, tightly constricted interiors. Wilma Napp (Marie Shell) is trapped in her apartment and in her life, the victim of her memories. Desperate for human contact, she finds herself responding to obscene phone caller Harlen McCurdy (Louis Frederick). When McCurdy comes to her house, they begin a twisted dance of desire and fear that ends in death.

Howe is a sharply observant writer with a comic, but dark, sensibility — the opening lines alone are practically worth the price of admission. And having the short scenes clipped by blackouts and bridged by Will Knapp's live slide guitar adds to our sense of forboding. But Wilma is too clear-eyed about her situation to be quite so vulnerable to Harlen's smooth manipulation or quite so fearful of the world. I wanted more — Wilma is far too vivid a character to wind up a symbol of hopelessness.

BABY WITH THE BATHWATER

"There is no right and wrong. Everything is permitted," says Nanny, a sinister school-marm type who wanders in to the Dingleberry household and begins giving orders. In Baby with the Bathwater, Christopher Durang's macabre absurdist play, such things are par for the course. The Shotgun Players' revival, at La Val's Subterranean, highlights the hysteria and anarchy in this tale that illustrates the frightening consequences of people in power.

Helen (Judy Phillips) and John (Robert Bertozzi) are a couple of unpleasant, thoroughly incompetent new parents who have yet to name their child since they haven't yet chosen a sex for it. Karen Goldstein steals the show as Nanny, who seems to be summoned by the angel of child care to assist these unfit parents. But she turns out to be just as unstrung as everyone else, seducing the father, screaming at the child, and sleeping between Helen and John.

The Shotgun Players' spare staging facilitates the mood of absurdism, leaving room for Durang's vividly bizarre imagery. The child, now called Daisy, grows up with a penchant for buses. (She hurls herself under them.) Daisy grows up to be a relatively sane young man in a dress. Yes, he's a boy. Just one of the many things his parents got wrong. As Daisy, Richard Silberg provides his own perspective on his childhood, and it is indeed amusing to learn what the silent baby had been thinking. Durang's play seems to answer the question of exactly what type of people would throw the baby out with the bathwater.

Reminiscent of Mark Rothko's ethereal color fields combined with Nathan Oliveira's existential expressionism, a single object (a hoop, an umbrella) hovers in a darkly luminous void. Stone/Wino guitar god Keith Richards can still rip it up Too old to be a brat, too bratty to be a snob and too rich to face mundane obstacles, Keith Richards can, and does make his own rules. A subscriber to Bob Dylan's dictum that "To live outside the law you must be honest," he's as up front and unabashed as they come. Asked about his forthrightness with the press, he replies, "How could I possibly remember the lie I told somebody a month ago?" The impression Richards gives is of someone perfectly content to be who he is and do what he does with no evident regard for external judgements or objections.

"One of the most encouraging things about working in music is that you don't think about (people's) differences. What you play and the way you're playing it is the only thing that counts. It's very hard to comprehend that people have so much difficulty getting along out there, because with music it's always so easy." Referring to his triumvirate with guitarist Waddy Wachtel and drummer Steve Jordan, who form Richards' band the X-pensive Winos, he says, "This is a funny lineup: the Jew, the black guy and the Anglo. We're a cross-section; it's a great three-way street."

Richards' new album Main Offender's, (Virgin) main achievement is to shake off the stylistic disorder, uncertain songwriting and calamity of studio guests that made his first album, Talk Is Cheap, diffuse and patchy. "The first album was kind of a fishing expedition; we were just seeing what we could do. That's always been difficult, because you can't create a style until you've got one," Richards said.

Keith Richards

What happened this time, in five studios on two coasts, was a focused, cohesive band album on which Richards' unceremonious growl is transmuted into a controllable musical instrument—not a smooth croon mind you, but enough to satisfy the critics.

From pulsing evocations of Exile On Main Street (the amazing "Eileen," "Will But You Won't") to mellow Al Green romanticism ("Hate It When You Leave," a beautiful gift for the Richards' missus) to sexy dance grooves ("Bodytalks," a duet with Sarah Dash), the album plays to the band's strengths, shifting arrangements, the instrumental lineup and the drum sound to gear each song differently. On "Words of Wonder," Richards plays bass, Charlie Drayton handles drums and Steve Jordan grabs a guitar. The well-realized goal was to get the feel down and let details like lyrics—which tend intentionally toward the vague and evocative rather than anything explicitly rational—fend for themselves. Sometimes the simplest, most obvious ingredients cook up so sweet.

Soul Asylum keeps rocking steady with Grave Dancers Union

"I used to think I could do anything else I wanted, and maybe have some other kind of job someday," Dave Pirner is saying. "But now it's more like an addiction. It would be very hard to kick."

Pirner's talking about being hooked on Soul Asylum. It's been more than a decade since he first got together with his Minneapolis chums, guitarist Daniel Murphy and bass player Karl Mueller, in punk-rock bands that "had a different name for every song." They were Bore Me To Death, The 18th Floor Residents, and, most infamously, Loud, Fast Rules. They settled on Soul Asylum for 1983's debut Twin/Tone EP, Say What You Will..., and drummer Grant Young had joined up by the torrid 1986 album Made to Be Broken, produced by then Hüsker Dü guitarist Bob Mould.

Since then, it's been more years of fighting the good fight than your average righteously principled band of ex-high school buddies in flannel and Chuck Taylor high tops could stand. Soul Asylum moved up to the big leagues with 1988's Hang Time on A&M, toured endlessly, got called the "Best Live Band in America" by the Village Voice, never underwent a personnel change, still don't hate each other's guts, and have wound up on Columbia with their new Grave Dancers Union.

Soul Asylum (l-r): Karl Mueller, Dave Pirner, Dan Murphy and Grant Young

Along the way, the band took over Pirner's life. He once held down jobs as a short-order cook and ran his own lawn mowing business, but now in addition to writing and singing almost all of the bands alternately bone-rattling and tender songs (Murphy contributes occasionally, though not to Union), he serves as Soul Asylum's combination spokesman/conscience/watchdog, making sure the band doesn't lose its soul to corporate America. On this day, the band had been rehearsing all day, Pirner was dealing with Columbia on the issue of cover art, making plans for the video shoot for "Somebody to Shove," Union's first rocking single, and getting set to head out for a gig in Toronto the next day.

"Right now, it's really what I am,"

Pirner, 28, says. "It's my personality and my personality is it. I become progressively more involved all the time. I like it a lot, but it kind of scares me. I don't know what I would be without it. If I had to start my life over, I'd have a lot of catching up to do."

"We're all real used to each other," Pirner says. "Everybody knows what to expect of everyone else, and we're real sensitive to each other quirks. Since we don't have to re-meet each other all the time, we can just concentrate on getting the job done."

And they took their time. "We've tried just about everything," Pirner says, of the band's efforts to do his often delicate songs justice while harnessing the band's stampeding live energy. "We started off doing it as quickly and cheaply as possible as a matter of means. And then Hang Time was our first big budget record, and we took a very anal, almost surgical approach."

The result is Soul Asylum's most stylistically varied—and accessible—record to date. Producer Michael Beinhorn brought in Booker T. to play keyboards on six songs, they first outsider to ever play on a Soul Asylum record and "an incredible thrill for me," Pirner says.

World/ Reggae

New releases by Ofra Haza, Alpha Blondy and more, are sure to please all world music tastes England's Cold Cut Crew put Israeli pop diva Ofra Haza on the world music map with an unauthorized sample of her "Im Nin'alu" on its remix of Eric B & Rakim's "Paid In Full." But when she followed her breakthrough album, Fifty Gates of Wisdom (Shanachie) with a pair of Middle Eastern Madonna albums for Sire/Warner Bros., the public shrugged.

Now she's returned to Shanachie and her Yemenite roots on Kirya, produced by Don Was with a guest recitation by Iggy Pop. "Daw Da Hiya," she says, "is based on a story about a young woman who was stoned to death because of her love. On this song I wanted a man with a low voice to talk, and Don said, 'What about Iggy Pop?' I didn't know him personally, but for me, he was somebody really wild. So he came to the studio, and I discovered a wonderful person."

Recorded in L.A. with members of Haza's band and Was (Not Was), Kirya blends East and West, Hebrew and English, jerrycan drums and synthesizers. Haza's strikingly pure, seductively lilting voice blossomed in a Tel Aviv slum, where she listened to Barbra Streisand records and her mother's traditional wedding songs. Immigrants from Yemen, whose isolated

Ofra Haza

Jewish community preserved its ancient culture, her parents also inspired "Trains of No Return," written during the Persian Gulf war. "When I saw my mother and father wearing gas masks," she says, "my mind flashed back to the Holocaust. And this song is to tell people that things like that could still happen."

In other world music related news, Côte D'Ivoirean reggae great Alpha Blondy makes a big rebound from a couple of lackluster albums with Masada (World Pacific). Once again on par with his masterworks Jerusalem and Apartheid Is Nazism, Alpha's reedy vocals insinuate themselves beautifully into 14 terrific tracks. He keeps his desire for universal religious respect bubbling with "God Is One" while keeping up to date with "Desert Storm," "Peace in Liberia" and "Sciences Sans Conscience." Other highlights are the title cut, "Yeye," the bow-wowling "Les Chiens" and a tribute to Bob Marley, "Mystic Night Move."

Also new on Columbia is a distinctive female trio from Eritrea and Ethiopia. On Midi, Maxi and Efti's self-titled debut, they lend a modern dance groove to many reggae-flavored originals including "Bad Bad Boys," "Sisterhood of Africa" and "Poppadink Tribe." Get it quick for a little "Jamma on da Savannah!"

Meanwhile, Jamaican DJ Don Supercat rocks hard with his U.S. debut Don Dada (Columbia) featuring his influential chanting with guests Heavy D, Trevor Sparks and Frankie Paul. "Get Red Hot" leads the list of 14 smokin' selections.

Mandatory on Heartbeat are new releases from reggae's two finest producer/artists. Niney the Observer internationalizes his mix on the modernized Freaks, while Lee Perry adds his current righteous ramblings over a dozen classic Coxsone riddims on The Upsetter and the Beat.

By ERIC WEISBART

I SAW THE LINGERING death of the Rock Star the other evening at the Shoreline. Sorry, Springs was gone, but I was not. Now, nowadays, Bruce isn't offering a new "Born in the U.S.A.," just personal records like Lucky Town and, in his own words, "fine rock n' soul entertainment." What else can a musical hero offer?

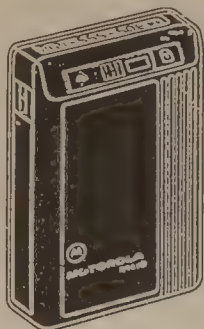

I know two artists who would have an opinion. Long ago, they outstripped Springsteen, taking the potential of the pop idol to a new level rooted in the body, race, and gender: a different sort of runaway American dream. They triumphed on film and television, created public controversies, and upset hierarchies and stereotypes with each new move. Several years later, no one's come up with anything better, unless you count Michael Jackson's desecralizing pop-as-Disney approach. Beyond the near-concurrent releases of his Thriller and her Erotica album, plus the book Sex, there's a broader question here: How is it, beyond decent (but hardly extraordinary) record sales, that Madonna and Prince remain such potent cultural icons?

STILL FUNKY

Prince almost didn't make it this far. The commercial failure of Graffiti Bridge, as an album and a movie, forced reduced ambitions for Diamonds and Pearls, the origins of his alliance with the New Power Generation were told in a D.C. comic. So Prince, who requires a mass audience to live up to his notions of Purple Stardom, carefully cultivated radio programmers and controversy: the risqué "Gett Off" earned video notice and "Cream" went to No. 1. Warner regained an interest in Prince, signing him to a new $100 million contract.

✶ won't have a film to go with it (another comic book should come out soon), but in every other way, the album's marketing scheme is grandiose enough for pop royalty. Plans call for each of the album's 18 tracks to receive a video. Comics and videos alike will tell a "rock soap opera" about a star, his pursuit by a journalist (played in the videos and on the album by Kirstie Alley), and his involvement with a Middle Eastern princess (Mayte, Prince's latest ingenue, said to be 18, a virgin, and "a classically trained ballerina and bellydancer." Art!). Future projects include scoring a James Brooks musical comedy and expanding "Thunder," from Diamonds and Pearls, into an 18-minute composition for the Joffrey Ballet.

It's a sign of the differences between the two that I don't have to tell you what Madonna's been up to, do I?

PORTRAIT OF THE ARTISTS

Prince is less a pop star than an artist who has made the attainment and total summation of pop stardom his project. From playing every instrument in any genre, to studio wizardry, to clothing, sex, and body image, to videos and film, to effortlessly manipulating the processes of celebrity so he can enter and leave at will, Prince has insisted on total mastery. He's the Picasso of pop music, an incredibly gifted formalist capable of memorizing, absorbing, and then bending into his own signature all styles that cross his path.

The great virtue of Prince's versatility is that he'll never run out. Every year he releases a 75-minute album; there are enough B sides floating around to fill a box set (I can't wait); sessions with the likes of Miles Davis await posterity. Warners could sign Prince to a long-term deal, confident that well into the future there would be a core audience of music fans eager to hear the development of the odd chord changes, harmonies, and tonal strokes that make up his raspberry beret funk. He also thoroughly demolishes the rock/R&B distinction, going well beyond Springsteen's soul-man posturing. And the initials in "Sexy M.F." aren't just a device to get an obscene title into print; they play up the male/female dualisms running through Prince's whole opus, as also seen in the new album's title, where a male symbol meets a female symbol meets ... a bugle.

The price of this, however, is that nothing Prince can do feels social. All of it is the product of an obsessive, monumental fantasy. As Lisa Jones revealed in the premier issue of Vibe, the interracial Minneapolis of Prince's films was a total fiction; there hasn't been a scene there like that since the jazzbo's. We can, and should, admire Prince for taking the components of stardom to new aesthetic peaks — a few more like him, and pop would get the respect jazz does. But he's no role model, almost by definition, since his art precludes followers. And that has to reduce its impact. How many people talk about Prince?

Now, Madonna is on everyone's lips because she's really Prince's opposite, pursuing celebrity as an end in itself, a virtuoso at nothing. You always think Madonna will run out of stuff pretty soon. That's meant she's had to take shrewd, monochromatic positions, tweaking liberals early on as a "Boy Toy," then moving her image steadily toward the fringe. Prince's music switches from shameless pop to off-putting solipsism every other album. Madonna encases her radicalism in a state-of-the-art sugarcoat; the liner notes to her new record worriedly make sure you understand that "all surface noise on the song 'Erotica' has been included intentionally." Prince gets ridiculed for everything but his music, while rock critics complain that no one ever pays attention to Madonna's oft-brilliant disco — in truth the essence of the politics.

Ironically, Madonna's always known that, with rock no longer central in the culture, her only chance at real celebrity influence was not to be identified primarily with her sound.

Prince uses music to illuminate his world. Madonna uses the world to sell her music. That makes Prince sound nobler, but it's actually Madonna's materialism that brings her to earth and leads specific types of people to identify with her. A friend complained to me that the book Sex, which Madonna says should be seen as "a fantasy, a dream," felt to her like it was put together by a focus group. I think that's right, and that all of Madonna's dreams seem that way, but that this connection with the zeitgeist is the key to her power.

ON SALE NOW

Sex pursues four powerful themes: S&M, sexual variation, celebrities, and Madonna's pussy. Others have ridiculed the book's text ("Honey poured from my 14-year-old gash and I wept"), but porn revolves around such banal stylizations. The tales (man/Madonna, woman/Madonna, salesgirl/shopper) got me going, and I appreciated the book's closeness to specific subcultures: Madonna doesn't just say she loves gay men, as Camille Paglia would; she takes you to her favorite gay male strip club. And the modern primitive queers are perfectly wholesome.

In Madonna's enlightened view, pornography is simply a form of media to manipulate, another way of invading the private realm. Her much-ballyhooed, practically required book functions as what might be called vicarious porn. You wouldn't watch it to be shocked and turned on, but to imagine that happening to the folks in middle America.

There is no sense of a symbol exposed and demystified, like topless Duchess Fergie, and maybe because of that there's little sexual charge to the photographs, though some of the shots are stunning. It changes nothing to see Madonna naked, just fills in some blanks.

Too bad Sex wasn't called Pornography, to complete the classic dichotomy with Erotica; once again, Madonna's music has grown to suffuse her pose with a subtlety and art otherwise lacking. This time, to a severe, quasi-tragic soft disco only the Pet Shop Boys have achieved before, she's a belligerent dominatrix — your clue is the "like a truck" line in "Erotica," a nice update on the virgins and prayers of old. David Bowie's poses were never so convincing. Of course, this is why Madonna infuriates some: One is drawn in, forced to keep consuming (videos, personal columns) to witness the stance developed further, as the otherwise impenetrable "Erotica" video makes a perfect epilogue to Sex.

Prince is easier to enjoy, though far more difficult to follow. The videos are all flash and reference: In the commercial for the album, Prince actually appropriates elements of Orson Welles' trailer for Citizen Kane; "Sexy M.F." introduces the Weirdly Bearded One's new Penis Gun, a microphone in the shape of a phaser; and "My Name Is Prince" features the star in a veil, claiming to incite urban riot (with an egotistical indifference, worthy of Ministry, to the political implications). And, as always, the music devours everything in its path, from the "Humpty Dance" bass of "My Name Is" to reggae in "Blue Light" to the techno (!) shadings of "Melt With U." So many elements are overlaid — not just musical, either; Prince plays skillfully with the moods and postures that accompany different sounds — that you get lost in all the elements, some of which are really bizarre. (I mean, what's with the Barbarella theme?) Promoting ✶ with holograms makes perfect sense. Shut the record off and the whole thing vanishes.

Prince and Madonna are fascinating for reasons that go beyond any album or momentary project. Each has made the possibilities that stardom opens up or conceals the center of his or her art, yet taken that insight in fundamentally opposite directions. You'll reach your own aesthetic judgments about their latest frolics. But we might as well enjoy the grandeur of their self-invention for as long as it lasts. ●

KEITH RICHARDS • MAIN OFFENDER (VIRGIN)

Been a long time that they've rocked and rolled. As the eldest approach 50, baby boomers raised on rock can't help finding the music's historic youthfulness increasingly irrelevant. Taught by the British invasion to let rock define essential components of their identity, most white Americans gave scruffy R&B-based purism a monopoly on "relevance" and "honesty." Which is why Keith Richards matters. After the death of John Lennon and as the other Stones have escaped into jazz, the art world, self-parody, and pedophilia, he's the only leading rocker of his generation making music that keeps the faith while articulating adult concerns.

Such is the iconic power of "Keef" — not just to younger musicians but also to the legions of fans for whom he signifies the '60s as much as do Nehru jackets — that both of his solo albums, as well as his new biography, merely plaster his face and ever-present cigarette on their covers. That ravaged face, bespeaking a life of dissipation survived, offers the guilt-ridden middle managers who purchase it the promise that "making it" (the album's first words) with ideals more or less intact is still possible.

His admirer Camille Paglia thinks Richards is the last refuge of the '60s Dionysian excess, but in fact the pleasures of his music these days are almost completely Apollonian. Like a great jazz singer, he distills the wisdom of experience into a modest, casual, and relaxed album that sounds tossed off until you notice how well it all coheres, even the reggae number and ballads. With nothing left to prove, he's the rock equivalent of Tony Bennett, an old pro still surprising his audience by working subtle variations on a well-trodden style whose precepts he adheres to with evangelical fervor.

Richards is astoundingly self-effacing for a famous guitarist, restricting his trademark astrigent riffs to where they disappear completely on some songs. He seems more comfortable now with his own voice than on Talk Is Cheap. There, co-lead vocals and multi-tracking connoted a lack of self-confidence; here, Richards relies on his strangled croon, which still has trouble getting words out, but fits these restrained songs perfectly. Rarely revving past medium tempo, reflective rather than cathartic, they impart fragments of self-knowledge and hints of mortality. "A little bit is missing / Wonder where it's gone / Pay me no attention / I babble on and on," he puns in the reggae "Words of Wonder." "Bodytalks" sounds detached, as if the star can enjoy ogling a passing beauty without needing (or wanting) to go any further.

Well past the day when he has to turn his head until the darkness goes, Keith Richards shows us that pop music is more than just youth culture. As rock's classiest foreign statesman, he proves that it can still sum up the U.S.A., even now that the nation's largest organization is the American Association of Retired People.

MEAT BEAT • MANIFESTO SATYRICON (MUTE/ELEKTRA)

This might be the strongest industrial album of the year, and all I can think to call it is feel-good and gentle! The 10-song/snippet opening of this album, a 42-minute suite that starts with "Pot Sounds" and ends in "Euthanasia," may be a joke about music as mind-control soothing the savage breast — hence, the title — but I don't see the need for self-deprecation: This is as accomplished and seductive as I can recall this genre ever getting. Nothing collides in the name of brute anger or Tackhead rant: Rap, punk, dub, Depeche Mode melody, funk, techno, ambient spacings, and blunt political sound clips dance against one another in an expert balance of hard and soft. Terse lyrics (three to eight syllables a line) like "There's no single disposition / on the planet / just the colours that collide" are perfect background, evoking the brainiac flashes of dance-floor consciousness. Maybe some of them are ironic; who really cares?

The rest of the album is more conventional, the usual barrage of noise and pseudo-Left political sloganeering (right, the answer to "a culture permeated on dominance and oppression" is a song that chants "I am the Son of Sam I am I am" 20 times a chorus — and Too Much Joy beat you to that joke, fellas). All I can say is, if you're open to finding genuine musical innovation wherever it occurs, this album shouldn't be missed. Oh, and hey: did those rave-y/techno noises ultimately originate with the whirling noises made by those monster computer banks in cheesy British sci-fi shows?

GERARDO • GERARDO DOS (INTERSCOPE)

Flipping channels around, suddenly there's Gerardo on Channel 14 performing "Ven Michu Michu" for a TV studio audience, pushing power out in lightning Spanish rap. He's got two homeboy harmonizers in his crew, in baseball caps and Indian ponytails like his own, posing coolly in huge baggy hip hop suits. There's two scantily clad fly girls jerking and sweating. Gerardo, bare-chested because the flap of his denim overalls is down, displays his buff like Marky Mark, his motorcycle jacket emblazoned with Asian icons helping make him sweaty. No way in heaven or hell or in between anyone's going to come in here and change the channel. I'll slap them upside the head and if they die, I'm sorry, but it's Gerardo.

Commercial break, and Gerardo's sitting on a celebrity panel of judges for a Latina model contest. He's smiling and chatting, looking as if he's trying hard to respect what he's doing. There's six models in swimsuits competing. One of them makes Paula Abdul look frail. The winner ends up being the skinniest girl in the freakiest suit.

Gerardo Dos, the eloquent Ecuadorian rapper's second album, opens with a phone message from Marky Mark about a girl with a big butt. "Here Kitty Kitty," the English version of "Ven Michu Michu," has stinging lyrics that don't come across quite so in the Spanish version when it's not your first language. The beats slam evil and addictive like an NWA track, and the video especially, with an exhibition of violent models in sexy catwoman suits, will offend feminists, vegetarians, and animal rights advocates. Gerardo is irresistibly playful and sensual, like Mick Jagger doing "Stray Cat Blues."

A gentle, sympathetic pro-life song is "Deja Me Nacer" (Let Me Be Born). But "Pepe (Bust a Cap On 'em)" is pro-condom use, told macho like a baseball game. Gerardo is too fly, too shy, too much twinkle in his eye, too much obsessed with my booty. May be that, as the song says, "It's a Latin thang."

DEMO TAPE O' THE WEEK

ENDANGERED SPECIES

ONE OF THE most radically original demo tapes I've ever run across, Endangered Species' seven-song offering is named "What Grandma Told Me" for a reason. In the words of group vocalist/songwriter Sebastian Craig, the music is meant to be "a tribute to patriarchy," an appreciation of the wisdom and inspiration that both Craig and guitarist Mark French have gleaned from their African American grandmothers.

Framed as an informal exchange between friends and relatives, the tape is distinctive in the manner of, say, Charles Burnett's film To Sleep with Anger. The in-song commentary on false promises ("Open Fire"), facing one's fears ("I Give You Back"), and fending off creditors ("Jail My Body"), as well as the between-song dialogue on first love and making gumbo, all flow together under a common theme: The timeless struggle to find physical and spiritual well-being amid the ever-changing obstacles of daily life.

The casual lyricism of the words — pulled in various directions by Craig's soulful note-bending inflections — as well as the comfortably moody arrangement of acoustic guitar, above-ground percussion, and fretless bass come from somewhere beyond the pop-music fold. Influences are hard to peg unless you trust the fleeting apparitions that pop up inside this verse or that riff. (Was that Leonard Cohen or Robert Johnson, the Last Poets or Paul Cebart?)

Really what makes the music attractive is not anything so tangible as nice chops or clever insight but the atmospheric conditions under which each song unfolds. Whether it's pitter-pattering congas, twangy guitar, and faint background voices underscoring the warmth of a party among friends ("Couscous") or anxious drum swells and a shuddering cello mimicking the rhythms of lovemaking ("The Flea Song"), Endangered Species seem less concerned with making music than with capturing the music already inherent in human interaction.

shopworn and aged Nebraska-born writer, photographer, critic, and teacher Wright Morris has an eye for capturing beauty in the details of everyday life many of us would never even think to notice. His photographs of world-weary farm houses, old Main Street storefronts, and such simple objects as tarnished silverware, a tattered sweater hanging from a hook, and an old stovepipe in a dark corner are poignant moments of a vanishing part of American life. Morris is primarily a writer (The Field of Vision, Plains Song), and only took photographs in the '40s and '50s — pioneering the concept of publishing photos and text side by side — until finding he'd shot all he needed to shoot. question: Which band did both Guns N' Roses and Metallica cover at the recent Day on the Green? Answer: the Misfits, the legendary punk-metal progenitors Glenn Danzig led in the late 1970s and early 1980s. More recently, Danzig's fronted a more straight-ahead metal crew, Danzig, who have three albums, including Danzig II: Lucifer, an underappreciated classic I'm still amazed didn't bust them into the big time. Trash-cult satanist and steroid freak though he is, Glenn Danzig has an angel's voice, a baritone croon unequalled among current white male singers, one that honors Elvis, Morrison, and even Bing in its weirdly shivery ways. dirty movies Hack film critic Michael Medved has found a bandwagon on which to jump. His new book, Hollywood vs. America: Popular Culture and the War on Traditional Values, vilifies the film industry's fascination with sex, drugs, violence, and (gasp) profanity. Recently in Reader's Digest, Medved was hilariously aghast at the fact that Cape Fear's villain was a religious nut who spoke in tongues and that the "hero" was a wimp who had affairs. These were the exact things, I believe, that gave the film its brilliant moral complexity. To each his own, I guess. Check out Quayle, I mean Medved, tonight at Cody's — be sure to ask him if he thought the word fuck was overused in Glengarry Glen Ross. 8 p.m., Cody's Books, 2454 Telegraph, Berk. (510) 845-7852. (Miriam Wolf)

JOE HENRY
"The Diving Bell"

BY KURT WOLFF

IT'S A PERFECT DAY for the Jayhawks. I'm three cups of coffee into my Saturday, staring out the window at the gray, cloudy sky, listening over and over to a band that makes me homesick for the crisp chill of a Midwestern November afternoon. The kind of afternoon that makes you drink coffee and stare at the sky, reclining into a day of melancholy.

The Jayhawks' new label, Def American, has finally, after several delays — and after the Jayhawks took time to back their friend Joe Henry on his brilliant new record, Short Man's Room — released the Minneapolis band's third album, Hollywood Town Hall. This week the band plays a couple of dates opening for the Black Crowes — Concord Pavilion Nov. 1; San Jose State Event Center Nov. 2 (510-762-BASS) — that are as close to a Bay Area appearance I know about since I first heard them in 1989, the year Twin/Tone released their second LP, Blue Earth (their self-titled 1985 debut was on Bunkhouse).

What hooked me into Blue Earth was the lonely tone that lay in the balance between words and music. It was close to being true country-rock, but still it meandered along its own dirt path through the world of American music — country, soul, Gram Parsons, Neil Young. The songs take their time, as if the band had to first find the map, then jerry-rig the carburetor of the van, making it another thousand miles or so before someone fell in (or out of) love, or they ran out of gas money and had to pawn a few belongings. That's OK, because they felt like stopping anyway to check out the scenery, have a cup of coffee, maybe even spend the night in a backwater motel.

And the long black dream is over,
as the snow falls on and on
And it takes five cups of coffee to come down before I sleep

Along the way we get lyrical observations from vocalists Mark Olson and Gary Louris that could fill an encyclopedia. The songs aren't linear stories, they're more like poetic fragments — isolated moments of dreams, emotions, or those poignant realizations that come from seeing sunlight reflected on the leaves, or someone leaning against the wall of a downtown cafe. You may not know exactly what the songs are about, but somehow the words make sense.

I hoped to find you this morning, talking to the trees
I could miss you, after what went down

There is a melancholy throughout most of their material, but the words also capture that feeling of waking up to the truth, how-want to join a new family? Ever since I've lived in the Bay area, Mekons shows at the Kennel Club have become a kind of Passover ritual for me, a time I gather with a wide range of friends (people who'd never all turn up in the same place otherwise) to honor our shared values and renew faith. Honest, they're that, er, right on. I'm still not 100 percent sure we'll be celebrating Clinton's election this evening, but either way, who better to explain the news of the day than the greatest Left band of the Reagan-Thatcher years? Time Warner subsidiary. Look any day now for a new EP featuring two songs from their I ♥ Mekons album, forthcoming in January. 9 p.m., Kennel Club, 628 Divisadero, SF. (415) 931-1914. (Weisbard) may heaven protect us from a clinton loss on Tuesday, but whether or not the Democrats triumph, the Breeders will be rocking out at Slim's the day after. And if the Reagan/Bush era finally does end, then it will definitely be time to start downing tequila and getting absolutely bonkers to the viscerally female rock and roll provided by Pixies bass player Kim Deal and her cohorts. On their first album, Pod, the Breeders proved that they were a level beyond the Pixies, and their new EP shows encouraging signs of musical progress. Slim's will be the ideal place to see their San Francisco debut. 9 p.m., Slim's, 333 11th St. SF. (415) 621-3330. (Leonard) do you know how much foundation it takes to read the nightly news? A lot. But you have enough leftover from Hollywood, an ironic comment on the tinsel town where at least half this record was recorded (the rest was in Minnesota).

You get into dissecting a record too hard and you start getting too academic, losing the feeling, the whole point of listening to it in the first place. I know I shouldn't make assumptions, but when a so-called alternative band gets picked up by a major label, the question "Have they sold out?" can't be avoided. No, they haven't sold out. Maybe Blue Earth will age better, but I can play this record over and over.

And so, for one of the album's stand-out tracks, "Nevada, California," the Jayhawks move to the couch by the window, sit back down, pour another cup of black coffee, and let the words and the familiar, easy-going melody resume control.

First you twist then you turn
You're on life's icy mountain, dear passenger ● ever bitter; the music adds a kind of stability that keeps you pushing ahead despite it all.

ANGELS AND DEVILS

"Two Angels," where that last line comes from, appears both on Blue Earth and Hollywood Town Hall. On one hand it's the same song, carrying the same emotions. On the other hand, the tone is very different. Hollywood was produced by George Drakoulis, who produced the Black Crowes, and he's given the Jayhawks a much bigger sound. The chords feel larger, the lead guitar-playing is smoother: less of the Crazy Horse fuzz that punctuated much of Blue Earth. Hollywood Town Hall is definitely the most "rock" the band has sounded yet.

On Blue Earth's "Two Angels," there's a space between the notes that gives the vocals a gut feeling of loneliness. The music on the Hollywood version fills in gaps that maybe didn't need filling. You could call it richer, but when you take away that emptiness, the song loses some of its edge. The acoustic guitar, which almost amplified the silences on the first version, is nearly gone, a bigger electric sound taking its place. There's piano on the Hollywood version (courtesy of Heartbreaker Benmont Tench). I listen to the two back to back and the new one feels crowded.

But despite the changes the mood is intact. The voices — Mark Olson's hovering somewhere between tenor and baritone, blending with Louris' higher pitch on the harmonies — still feel comfortably lived in, helping maintain that down-to-earth quality that keeps the band grounded in the reality of the sidewalks, pawn shops, highways, and flat Midwestern countryside they come out of. The picture on the CD cover shows the band grouped on a stuffed couch posed in front of an old wooden building with "Hollywood Town Hall" painted above the door, the chill of winter shining in the snow and barren trees. JERRY GONZALEZ & THE FORT APACHE BAND

Jerry Gonzalez knows from roots. A Puerto Rican baby boomer from the Bronx, the trumpeter/congalero/band leader plays Afro-Cuban jazz not as a middle-of-the-road hybrid but as a music with a fervent, fertile life of its own, anchored equally in Arsenio Rodriguez and Dizzy Gillespie, Tito Puente and McCoy Tyner. From his 1980 American Clave debut Yo Ya me Cure through his influential Rumba Para Monk to his brand-new Moliendo Cafe:

Coffee Rumba (Alfa), Gonzalez has defined the vanguard (on the East Coast, at least), and his band — saxophonists Carter Jefferson and Joe Ford, pianist Larry Willis, bassist Andy Gonzalez, and percussionist Steve Berrios — is one of the contemporary greats, however you cut your categories.

DIXIE McCALL'S PATTERNS FOR LIVING The glamorous Justin Bond is just standing in for Dixie McCall in this slight but highly enjoyable evening of show tunes and seeming autobiography, but by the end of the evening, we feel we know her pretty well. From "Psycho Killer" to "Goldfinger," Bond's songlist is a tour through campy pop-abilia, interspersed with cocktail-hour chatter that somehow manages to let slip glimpses of intriguing mini-dramas: disappointed parental expectations, no-good "straight" men who wear white pants, nicotine fits, and more. Bond is a fairly mesmerizing performer; even if he's not the greatest singer, the stories he tells are enough to leave us wanting more. It all takes place in the inimitable Athens by Night (atmosphere: lounge) restaurant on Valencia, with Ken Mellman on piano. (Heather Mackey) Wed.-Thurs. at 9 pm. 'RISE AND REMEMBER'

Even if you're a card-carrying atheist, why not commemorate the Day of the Dead at Trinity Church? You won't have to sit through any sermon on the evils of the flesh. Father Tom Dowling will lead a nonsectarian service that includes a procession of artists, a ritual pinning of mementos (bring one) on a permanent burlap shrine (the creation of Alex Ghia), and the Gomi School (a.k.a. Critical Mass, a.k.a. Jeffery Berstein, Marquee Corblatt, Lynn Penneman, Adam Savage, D.C. Spensley, Brett Roncelli) traipsing down the aisle with an Exquisite Corpse on their backs. In assembling the "Rise and Remember" exhibit, not only has curator Katherine Cook temporarily united church and contemporary art, she's woven a rich multicultural tapestry from the Bay Area's panoply of artists: Eleanor Dickinson (large-scale crucifixions on black velvet), Stephen De Staebler, Lin Evola, Rupert Garcia, Paul Mavrides, Jayne Shor (a Whistler-esque nocturne with rusty railroad spike), and Carlos Villa.

Live 105 MODERN ROCK NEWS

Last week, Kitchens of Distinction played the latest LIVE 105 Free Concert in Civic Center Park in Berkeley. The English trio played a cool 60 minute set that included songs from their first album like "Quick As Rainbows" and "Drive That Fast" as well as new songs like "Smiling" and "4 Men" from the latest record. Thanks to all our friends in the East Bay for coming out. Here are some pictures:

KITCHENS OF

AND THE LIVE
105 CREW IN BERKELEY

Wake up to LIVE 105 and the first thing you're bound to hear is Alex Bennett. There's no one in the world quite like Alex Bennett. His program is an interesting combination of opinion, conversation, comedy and Modern Rock.

Some of the guests who have been on the show lately have included William Shatner, Camille Paglia, Wolfgang Puck, Gordon Jump from WKRP in Cincinnati, future vice-President Al Gore, Plastic Surgeon to the stars Alan Gaynor, Tom Kenny, Kevin Meaney, Jake Johannsen, and the list goes on and on.

And now comes the first-ever "Alex Bennett Pajama Party." Be listening to LIVE 105 this Friday, (October 30) from 6 to 10AM as Alex, newperson Lori Thompson, trafficologist Lisa Carr and the entire morning team broadcast live from Alpha Omega Cron Phi (guess that's how you spell it) Sorority at San Jose State University. This should be fun.

Alex Bennett

In the news:

Rumors abound in the U.K. that Kate Bush may finally be ready to tour next year to support her new album due out in the Spring.

And rumors are resurfacing that Shane MacGowan will rejoin the Pogues. In the meantime, he's just finished recording a version of "What A Wonderful World."

See you next week.

Look for us next week in the Guardian and keep listening to LIVE 105!

LEWIS KLAHR

Like post-apocalyptic pop fiction, Lewis Klahr's Super-8 collage animations weave phantasmic travelogues out of the sudden debris you might find in a demolished fallout shelter. Crudely scissored bits from a garish detergent advertisement, photo sequences of thrift-store fashion models, and illustrations from paperback porno all cavort against magazine backdrops of '50s dream homes while deceptively simple soundtracks mix chattering insects with scratchy "easy listening." Working in a tradition that includes Max Ernst, Richard Hamilton, and Stan Vanderbeek, the 12 short films that constitute this consumerexpressionist series are powerful affirmations of Klahr's low-tech mastery at manipulation-media discards: Tales of the Forgotten Future is devastating cultural criticism on a trash-digger's budget.

RESERVOIR DOGS Writer-director Quentin Tarantino's startling debut is an over-the-top combo of blood-soaked comedy and slapstick ultraviolence. A crew of identically dressed "professionals" assemble in the aftermath of a bungled jewelry heist to figure out what went wrong on the job. Dogs' elliptical narrative circles over the before-and-after of the caper, dropping priceless dollops of hard-boiled dialogue and the echoes of a zillion pulp rhapsodies. Harvey Keitel, Steve Buscemi (finally, he's a star), and Tim Roth turn in substantial displays of technique, but what Tarantino does with Michael Madsen, Lawrence Tierney, and a cavalcade of '70s bubblegum radio hits you'll never forget. An instant classic. BLADE RUNNER — THE DIRECTOR'S CUT Eerily beautiful in smoky blues and dripping yellows, the futuristic, not to mention apocalyptic, depiction of L.A. in the director's cut of Blade Runner seems even more timely now than in the early '80s when the film was first released. This cut has done away with an annoying voice-over, the tagged-on happy ending, and added a dream sequence. The changes leave the humanistic sci-fi more subtly textured, bleaker, and "more real," if that's possible in a world where humans are fighting and falling for "replicants" — androids with DNA. Harrison Ford plays one of his better roles as a conflicted replicant assassin wondering what makes a human human. (Daphne Beal) San Francisco: Bridge (3010 Geary at Blake, 415-751-3212): daily at noon, 2:30, 5, 7:30, and 10. East Bay: Shattuck Cinemas (2230 Shattuck, Berk. 510-644-3370): call for times.

BOB ROBERTS Wunderkind Tim Robbins stars in the title role of this political satire piece that he also wrote and directed, about a popular American folksinger who's also a millionaire, a reactionary right-winger (one of his albums is called The Times Are Changing Back), and now a candidate for U.S. Senate. Robbins' film is a mock documentary that follows the Bob Roberts campaign across Pennsylvania in the fall of 1990, as the U.S. is gearing up for war against Iraq. The abundance of cultural references (including nods to Spinal Tap) make this a very smart film that's not only funny, sharp, and on target, but frighteningly close to reality. (Kurt Wolff)

DANZON Director Maria Novaro's Danzon follows Julia, a telephone operator from Mexico City, who leaves home briefly in search of Camello, her dance partner of six years who has disappeared. The rest of the story, which unfolds as gracefully as the dance it is named after, follows Julia on her quest. She winds up in the coastal city of Veracruz, where she is befriended by a group of sex workers and a transvestite who help her with her search, which ultimately becomes a search for self. (Arlin Tobias Gajilan) San Francisco: Gateway (Jackson at Battery, 415-421-3353): daily at 1, 3:10, 5:20, 7:30, and 9:40. East Bay: ACT (2128 Center at Shattuck, Berk. 510-548-7200): call for times.

ENCHANTED APRIL Unhappily married Josie Lawrence and Miranda Richardson answer an ad to rent an Italian castle for a month along with cantankerous Joan Plowright and beautiful socialite Polly Walker in a film that becomes more and more fascinating as it unfolds, and will enchant you for far longer than April. (Zena Jones) San Francisco: Kabuki 8 (Post at Fillmore, 415-931-9800): call for times. East Bay: Emery Bay (6330 Christie, Emeryville, 510-420-0107): call for times.

FEED This is not Dana Carvey. This is the real thing. (George Bush) San Francisco: Opera Plaza (Van Ness and Golden Gate, 771-0102): daily at 12:15, 2, 4, 6:30, 8:15, and 10. East Bay: UC Theatre (2036 University, Berk. 510-843-6267): Wed/28-Thurs/29 at 5:45, 7:30, and 9:15.

1492: CONQUEST OF PARADISE Was Columbus a fascist out to exploit the New World he "discovered"? Or just a "man of passion" (as the ham-fisted Gerard Depardieu, playing the mighty navigator, describes himself) determined to follow his dream of exploring the unknown? In Ridley Scott's 2-1/2-hour saga, Columbus is played as an underdog — a man who fought to work with the natives, not against them; and a man who, during his lifetime, never got proper recognition for his "discovery" from the Europeans. That may be the message, but the film is little more than a colorfully shot video for the Chariots of Fire-like Vangelis soundtrack: Too much sensationalism (Depardieu falls to his knees on a beach in the New World in excruciating slow motion, too little drama (Depardieu's kneeling, we're looking at our watches). Thelma and Louise was exciting for its story; what stands out in Blade Runner are the sets; but faced with a screenplay that's dramatically weak and cinematography that's disproportionately pretty, 1492 proves Scott's directorial skills aren't all they're cracked up to be. (Kurt Wolff) San Francisco: Alexandria (5400 Geary at 18th Ave. 415-752-5100): call for times. East Bay: California (Kittredge at Shattuck, Berk. 510-848-0620): call for times.

GAS FOOD LODGING You could say this film is another in a recent line of Americana stories about small towns and quirky characters. But writer/director Allison Anders' feature debut about a single mother (Brooke Adams) with two teenage daughters (Ione Skye and Fairuza Balk) is a refreshing and intelligent piece of work. The desert location is beautiful (it was shot in Deming, New Mexico), but the women are almost oblivious to their surroundings; their world revolves around local hot spots like the truck stop where Mom works. The film has its cute side — K-Mart shopping spree fantasies, and even a high school guy in love with Olivia Newton-John — but ultimately Anders deals very well with serious issues like race relations, family relationships (which include some tough personal secrets), and, of course, love. (Kurt Wolff) East Bay: Albany (1115 Solano, Albany, 510-524-5656): call for times.

GLENGARRY GLENN ROSS A caffeine-fed symphony of nonstop dialogue, David Mamet's Glengarry Glenn Ross is so agitated, its characters never seem to complete a sentence. Set in a bunker-like real estate office, four jaded salesmen — decrepit Jack Lemmon, caustic Ed Harris, feckless Alan Arkin, and fiery Al Pacino — trade an endless stream of plans, ploys, and insults in a desperate race to win a sales promotion. A riveting update of cutthroat '50s corporate noirs, like Executive Suite, director James Foley's (After Dark My Sweet, At Close Range) whirlwind mix of lounge lighting and seamy closeups prove considerably less stilted than Mame's directorial outings, but the motor-mouth milieu is clearly the playwright's own. Savage and relentless, this is filmmaking that doesn't waste time catching its breath: an energized requiem for the art of the deal. (Chuck Stephens) San Francisco: Galaxy (1285 Sutter at Van Ness. 415-474-8700): daily at 6:10, 8:30, and 10:45 with matinees Sat. and Sun. at 1:15 and 3:30. East Bay: Emery Bay (6330 Christie, Emeryville. 510-420-0107): call for times. UA (2274 Shattuck, Berk. 510-843-1487): call for times.

HERO Here's another one of those movies that you go into thinking great cast, great director — what could go wrong? And then you come out thinking, what the hell went wrong? Perhaps the body of Stephen Frears was taken over by the soul of Frank Capra, making Hero a melt-in-your-mouth sweet treat that ends up cloying. More likely Hero's problems have to do with some blatant miscasting. Andy Garcia's beautiful face can't redeem the fact that this movie smooths his intense edge and has him looking all moon-eyed and calflike — very unattractive. And Geena Davis is as buttoned-down as her TV reporter wardrobe. With no sexuality and no 100-watt smile, she's just another driven career woman looking for the important things in life. Dustin Hoffman is the only one who comes out of this looking great. His unsung hero is as compelling as small-time con as Ratso Rizzo. (Miriam Wolf) San Francisco: Presidio (Chestnut near Scott. 415-922-1318): daily at noon, 2:25, 4:50, 7:20, and 9:50. East Bay: UA (2274 Shattuck, Berk. 510-843-1487): call for times. Emery Bay (6330 Christie, Emeryville. 510-420-0107): call for times.

HOWARDS END Highly stylized, yet languorously lovely look at 1910 class and social hostility, in which Emma Thompson, Helena Bonham-Carter, and Anthony Hopkins are outstanding, and may make you wish a few of its old-fashioned graces still existed today. (Zena Jones) San Francisco: Opera Plaza (Van Ness and Golden Gate. 771-0102): daily at 12:45, 3:45, 7, and 9:45. East Bay: Oaks (1875 Solano, Berk. 510-526-1836): call for times.

HUSBANDS AND WIVES Woody Allen and Mia Farrow are a married couple whose best friends (Sydney Pollack and Judy Davis) suddenly announce they're splitting. This causes an expected questioning on their home front, and results in each exploring new romantic possibilities. Allen's is with student Juliette Lewis, whose character, in critiquing professor Allen's new book, adds the biting feminist edge Allen's films have needed for years. Allen sets his film up like a mock documentary — there's an overabundance of hand-held camera, and short "interview" segments with the principles are intercut with the story — but it's not even that. An interesting and I think successful use of documentary style purely as a storytelling device in portraying the existential crises of the fiftysomething generation. (Kurt Wolff) San Francisco: Opera Plaza (Van Ness and Golden Gate. 771-0102): daily at noon, 2:15, 4:30, 7:15, and 9:30. East Bay: Emery Bay (6330 Christie, Emeryville. 510-420-0107): call for times.

LAST OF THE MOHICANS If you don't know your 18th-century American history, you'll be hopelessly confused with the plot, and Daniel Day Lewis distinguishes himself mostly by running in this movie whose ravishing presentation can't save it. (Zena Jones) San Francisco: Galaxy (1285 Sutter at Van Ness. 415-474-8700): call for times. Stonestown (19th Ave. and Winston. 221-8182): daily at 12:15, 2:45, 5:10, 7:30, and 10. UA Movies 6 (280 Metro Center, 200 Colma Blvd., Colma. 415-994-2503): daily at noon, 2:30, 5, 7:30, and 10. East Bay: Emery Bay (6330 Christie, Emeryville. 510-420-0107): call for times. South Shore Cinemas (2245 Shoreline, Alameda. 510-521-4200): daily at 4:50, 7, and 9 with matinees Sat.-Sun. at 12:45 and 2:50. UA (2274 Shattuck, Berk. 510-843-1487): call for times.

L'ELEGANT CRIMINEL Francis Girod's film explores the life of Pierre Lacenaire (Daniel Auteuil), a man recognized for both his crimes and his eloquence by 19th-century French society. Lacenaire demonstrates his rejection of all societal norms and constraints by engaging in a life of illicit and often audacious activity "to amuse myself," as he puts it. A series of crimes eventually leads to his arrest, imprisonment, and execution, a verdict based on his own representation in court. Auteuil's performance is stunning as he recreates Lacenaire's command of the written and spoken word. (Sarah Skaggs) San Francisco: Lumiere (1572 California at Polk. 415-885-3200): daily at noon, 2:30, 5, 7:30, and 10. East Bay: Shattuck Cinemas (2230 Shattuck, Berk. 510-644-3370): call for times.

LIGHT SLEEPER Writer/director Paul Schrader comes back from nearly a decade of flops with a compelling, intensely personal portrait of a Manhattan cocaine delivery boy (Willem Dafoe) — a reformed user who's unsure of where his life is headed now that he's 40 and his dealer boss (Susan Sarandon) is getting out of the business. Schrader's heavy on the atmosphere (which includes a soundtrack by Michael Been and beautiful cinematography by Ed Lachman), more concerned with digging into Dafoe's struggle to reconcile his hazy past and future than getting bogged down with solving the drug-related murder(s) that are the film's subplot. (Kurt Wolff) East Bay: Albany (1115 Solano, Albany. 510-524-6566): call for times.

THE MAN WITHOUT A WORLD Eleanor Antin's film is a silent black-and-white Yiddish folktale set in a small village in eastern Poland, complete with a melodramatic storyline, Griffith-like fadeouts, and intertitles — yet it was made in 1991! The Man Without a World is artist/filmmaker/professor Antin's paeon to the long-forgotten art of silent filmmaking. It's not pretentious, as you might imagine such a "conceptual" film to be. The story centers around two lovers, Zevi and Rukheleh, whose relationship is rocked when Zevi (a poet) falls for a traveling ballerina and her bohemian lifestyle. The sordid "shocking" details Antin tosses in — Rukheleh gets pregnant out of wedlock; Zevi's sister is insane and takes to living under a bridge; just after being buried, Zevi's mother rises from the dead for a crazy graveyard dance — give the sweet little story plenty of twists. (Kurt Wolff) East Bay: UC Theatre (2036 University, Berk. 510-843-6267): Sun/1 at 1, 3, 5, 7, and 9.

THE MIGHTY DUCKS Everyone has probably seen this film at one time in their lives. The plot is the same, only the sport has changed. Disney's latest, The Mighty Ducks, delivers an astoundingly clichéd tale full of one-liners and moral lessons in which Gordon Bombay (Emilio Estevez), a bloodthirsty young lawyer, suddenly finds himself coaching a bumbling assortment of hockey players with hearts of gold. In the end, District 15 becomes a well-equipped team of winners and Bombay gains something much more valuable than any championship trophy — the important qualities of teamwork, honesty, and fair play. Sound familiar? Although I found the film's humor less than subtle and lacking in creativity, it did seem to appeal to the rest of the much-younger audience. (Sarah Skaggs) San Francisco: Empire (85 West Portal at Vicente. 415-661-2539): call for times. East Bay: Century (8201 Oakport, Oakl. 510-562-9990): call for times. Orinda (4 Orinda Theater Square, Orinda. 510-254-9060): Fri. at 7 and 9; Sat.-Sun. at 2, 4:30, 7, and 9; Mon.-Thurs. at 7 only. Grand Lake (3200 Grand, Oakl. 510-452-3556): call for times. Oaks (1875 Solano, Berk. 510-526-1836): call for times.

MR. BASEBALL Veteran baseball player Tom Selleck's fired by his managers and shipped to Japan, in this Fred Schepisi movie that tries to load its bases with humor, but strikes out with sitcom instead, proving that the title should have been Missed A Baseball. (Zena Jones) San Francisco: Kabuki 8 (Post at Fillmore. 415-931-9800): call for times. East Bay: Emery Bay (6330 Christie, Emeryville. 510-420-0107): call for times. South Shore Cinemas (2245 Shoreline, Alameda. 510-521-4200): daily at 7 with matinees Sat.-Sun. at 3.

MR. SATURDAY NIGHT Billy Crystal spans 50 years as a stand-up comic, fighting his way to the middle, and the belly laughs come fast and furious, but the film doesn't dwell on his darker side, thereby limiting its scope, although the rest puts pure lox on your bagel. (Zena Jones) San Francisco: Kabuki 8 (Post at Fillmore. 415-931-9800): call for times. Northpoint (Powell at Bay. 415-989-6060): call for times. East Bay: Shattuck Cinemas (2230 Shattuck, Berk. 510-644-3370): call for times. Piedmont (4186 Piedmont at 41st St., Oakl. 510-654-2277): call for times.

wants a part for his mistress. Meanwhile Martin Landau schleps his way through a stock "sleazy agent" role, the script trots through a Laverne and Shirley version of Robert Altman's The Player, and tired stereotypes of tinseltowners emerge so frequently that Ernest Borgnine's cameo as himself is practically a highlight. Unlike Altman's Hollywood satire, which was so great partially because it seemed so true to the contemporary film industry, Mistress seems based almost entirely on early '80s made-for-TV comedies about Hollywood. Lead performances by just about everyone but Robert De Niro, whose turn as a philistine entrepreneur-turned-film-producer is fine but bears an uncanny relationship to real life—his new company TriBeCa made this little comedy. (Chris Norris) San Francisco: Balboa (38th Ave. and Balboa. 415-221-8184): daily at 12:40, 4:30, and 8:20.

NIGHT IN THE CITY Robert De Niro and Jessica Lange star in director Irwin Winkler's gritty portrait of the people in New York's so-called "underbelly." Based on a novel by Gerald Kersh. San Francisco: Metro (Union and Webster. 931-1685): call for times. UA Movies 6 (280 Metro Center, 200 Colma Blvd., Colma. 415-994-2503): call for times. East Bay: Century (8201 Oakport, Oakl. 510-562-9990): call for times. Shattuck Cinemas (2230 Shattuck, Berk. 510-644-3370): call for times. Piedmont (4186 Piedmont at 41st St., Oakl. 510-654-2727): call for times.

OF MICE AND MEN Longtime collaborators Gary Sinise and John Malkovich's interpretation of the John Steinbeck novel is a visual and emotional masterpiece. With Sinise both directing and heading the cast, this adaptation fully renders the internal worlds of the two brothers and the inarticulate dynamic of their relationship. Malkovich is devastating in his portrayal of Lenny, a retarded man whose superhuman strength is his salvation—and his nemesis. The supporting characters, caught up in the same struggles of submission and need, are equally compelling. Both the stunning landscape and the subtle performances make this literary classic seem inherently cinematic. (Lisanne Skyler) San Francisco: Alhambra (Polk and Green. 415-775-2137): call for times. UA Movies 6 (280 Metro Center, 200 Colma Blvd., Colma. 415-994-2503): daily at 12:15, 2:30, 5, 7:20, and 9:40. East Bay: ACT (2128 Center at Shattuck, Berk. 510-548-7200): call for times. Piedmont (4186 Piedmont at 41st St., Oakl. 510-654-2727): call for times.

THE PANAMA DECEPTION You thought Noriega was just another dirty dictator running drugs to finance a golden throne? Think again. And think again, too, about how "just" George Bush's savage 1989 invasion of Panama really was. Director Barbara Trent (Coverup: Behind the Iran/Contra Affair) has dug beneath the mainstream media/U.S. government's depiction of this supposedly quick "operation" to show a much truer, and grimmer, picture—not only were thousands of Panamanians killed, thousands more tossed in prison for no reason, vast (mostly poor) sections of the country destroyed by U.S. forces, and the press sometimes violently censored, but the U.S. government has a long history of keeping a tight grip on whoever is in charge of this little country. According to a treaty signed by Jimmy Carter, Panama gets control of the Canal Zone at the end of this century; Trent's film argues that perhaps the invasion was a means toward reversing that treaty. The Panama Deception is full of information, and moves with an active pace mixing interviews with war footage and historical background. (Kurt Wolff) Roxie Cinema (3117 16th St. 415-863-1087): Sat.-Sun. at 11 am only.

PATRIOT GAMES Harrison Ford plays novelist Tom Clancy's CIA analyst character Jack Ryan, who gets in the business of protecting his wife and daughter from terrorists after personally thwarting an attack on the Royals while on vacation in England. For a minute there, director Phillip Noyce has something going, especially when he shows the CIA's methods of assassination to be even more coldly inhuman than the hit-and-runs the Irish terrorists concoct. But then, almost immediately, the film falls back in that old Hollywood groove—there are bad guys out there, they have big guns, and only one man can stop 'em. Bring the family. (Kurt Wolff) San Francisco: Balboa (38th Ave. and Balboa. 415-221-8184): daily at 1:25, 5:50, and 10:10.

THE PUBLIC EYE Joe Pesci brings new meaning to "I Am a Camera" as a man so obsessed with his tabloid-photographer job there's nothing else in his life until he meets nightclub owner Barbara Hershey, in a movie in which Pesci's many-nuanced perfection may well bring a tear to the public eye. (Zena Jones) San Francisco: Kabuki 8 (Post at Fillmore. 415-931-9800): call for times. East Bay: Fine Arts (Shattuck at Haste, Berk. 510-848-2038): call for times.

PURE COUNTRY Country music star George Strait plays, yep, a country music star who finds him torn between his down-home roots and the glitter of his new-found financial and popular success. Directed by Christopher Cain (Young Guns), Pure Country also stars Leslie Ann Warren and John Doe, who plays Strait's best friend. San Francisco: UA Movies 6 (280 Metro Center, 200 Colma Blvd., Colma. 415-994-2503): daily at 12:20, 2:45, 5:20, 7:45, and 10:10. Cinema 21 (2141 Chestnut. 415-921-6720): call for times. East Bay: South Shore Cinemas (2245 Shoreline, Alameda. 510-521-4200): daily at 5 and 9 with matinees Sat.-Sun. at 1.

A RIVER RUNS THROUGH IT Another time-and-place movie that's visually stunning, superbly scripted, and impeccably acted, and in which Presbyterian preacher Tom Skerritt teaches sons Craig Sheffer and Brad Pitt to equate religion and fly-fishing, with tragic results and a haunting aura that elevates the old-fashioned to a new high. (Zena Jones) San Francisco: UA Movies 6 (280 Metro Center, 200 Colma Blvd., Colma. 415-994-2503): daily at 1, 4, 7, and 9:45. Kabuki

8 (Post at Fillmore. 415-931-9800): call for times. East Bay: Grand Lake (3200 Grand, Oakl. 510-452-3556): call for times. California (Kittredge at Shattuck, Berk. 510-848-0620): call for times.

SARAFINA Whoopi Goldberg stars as a South African school teacher who demands that her students take pride in their heritage, which awakens the political consciousness in one student in particular, Sarafina (Leleti Khumalo), who goes on to defy school and government authorities. Directed by Johannesburg-born Darrell James Roodt (Place of Weeping). San Francisco: East Bay: Fine Arts (Shattuck at Haste, Berk. 510-848-2038): call for times.

SCHOOL TIES East Bay: Shattuck Cinemas (2230 Shattuck, Berk. 510-644-3370): call for times.

SINGLE WHITE FEMALE Where Barbet Schroeder's film falls down in execution, it holds up in the area of performance and concept. As Bridget Fonda's new roommate, Jennifer Jason Leigh renders her plainness special and eerily transforms it into a desperate insanity. The movie's portrayal of female friendship rings true in the way Fonda and Leigh initially "bond in trauma"—Fonda is crying over a man when Leigh enters for a roommate interview. Unlike previous psycho-thrillers, the relationship is between the two women and not the triangle of a shared lover. There are flaws: The last 45 minutes succumb to an unbelievable string of violence, and the N.Y. apartment is unrealistically big. But SWF makes a good attempt to explore the darker side of female friendship—something Hollywood hasn't given us before. (Daphne Beal) San Francisco: Balboa (38th Ave. and Balboa. 415-221-8184): daily at 2:35, 6:25, and 10:10.

SINGLES It takes a lot of imagination to completely sap Seattle rock culture of its charm, but somehow Cameron Crowe has managed. Though the script has been bouncing around since the early '80s, it reads like it took its cues from Melrose Place, with some earnest "singles" weaving in and out of each others' lives, bumping into each other in apartment complexes and coffee shops, and flaunting their mundanity for no apparent purpose. Aside from a good performance by Matt Dillon, there's not much to mosh to here. (Susan Gerhard) San Francisco: Vogue (Sacramento and Presidio. 221-8183): call for times. East Bay: UA (2274 Shattuck, Berk. 510-843-1487): call for times. Emery Bay (6330 Christie, Emeryville. 510-420-0107): call for times.

SNEAKERS Geeks, post-modern technoids, and wannabe cyberpunks will appreciate Sneakers. We're not talking Nikes or Pro-Keds here, we're talking about a group of computer hackers who get paid to test corporate security systems by breaking into them. Business is fine until they're hired by two government agents to steal a code-breaking box that is the key to the New World (dis)Order's most valuable information. Robert Redford, Sidney Poitier, River Phoenix, Dan Aykroyd, Ben Kingsley, and Mary McDonnell offer believable performances in this computerized post-Cold War political thriller. (Aryn Tobias Gajilan) San Francisco: Kabuki 8 (Post at Fillmore. 415-931-9800): call for times. Balboa (38th Ave. and Balboa. 415-221-8184): daily at 3:35 and 8. East Bay: Emery Bay (6330 Christie, Emeryville. 510-420-0107): call for times. Century (8201 Oakport, Oakl. 510-562-9990): daily at 12:25 only.

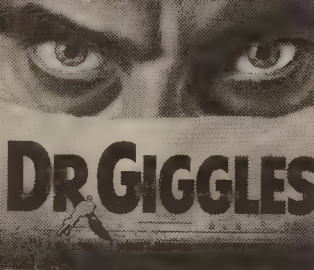

SOUTH CENTRAL Steve Anderson wrote and directed this saga of a former gang member from South Central L.A. who must battle against his past as well as risk his future to save his son from a life on the streets. It's based on Donald Baker's book Crips; Oliver Stone is executive producer. East Bay: Century (8201 Oakport, Oakl. 510-562-9990): daily at 3:05, 5:10, 7:20, and 9:35.

STORYVILLE Mostly expressionless lawyer James Spader decides to run for Congress since his family's been politically powerful for three generations, but the film turns into movie mayhem as its overloaded plot is conveyed via sex, lies, and videotape. (Zena Jones) San Francisco: Clay (2261 Fillmore at Clay. 415-346-1123): daily at noon, 2:25, 4:50, 7:15, and 9:40.

UNDER SIEGE Steven Seagal serves up a mean bouillabaisse as galley cook Casey Ryback, but once you learn that the drawling Cajun chef is really an ex-Navy S.E.A.L., expect few surprises. Post-cold war bad guys engineer a mutiny on the U.S.S. Missouri, and it's up to Seagal and Playboy's Miss July '89 (aboard for the captain's birthday party) to protect the new world order. Action junkies can count on a moderate fix. Unfortunately, the sleepy plot receives too much attention at the expense of the film's strong point: raw violence. At times, the movie resembles a "right-faced Dr. Strangelove. Tommy Lee

FIRST POEM

I saw a lot

—Derek Word Raskin, age 4

Composed after watching Food Not Bombs distribute free food at San Francisco City Hall.

HERE IS THE SUN

By David Morgenstern

I know I won't return to my apartment today. It's not that anything is different; no, I think this every day. But today I am sure.

It's a strange feeling, as I step out into the hallway, put my key in the lock, and turn it. I walk down those green steps, but lightly, as the people below say I stomp. The second door comes open, I step into the sunlight, the door is shut, locked. Sounds of the street. Buses, footsteps. Smells of the street. Gasoline, tar. Cold wind blowing against my cheeks, between my fingers. I can feel my eyelashes ruffling. Tears come to my eyes.

It's not so easy to explain, but the more I become aware of these things, these details, the more I am sure I will not return to my apartment today. How can I, when I know the joy of wind between fingers, of the restaurant's smell of grease and meat? How can I, when the glint off a hubcap spears my eye and throws me backward?

Everything and everyone rolls on; here is the corner market, Julio at the counter, giving me his familiar wave. Here is the woman whose name I do not know but whose face I see every day; I give her seventy-five cents, she gives me my cup of steaming coffee. Here is the sun, its faint heat feebly poking at the frigid air. Here is my busdriver, black face impassive, bespectacled, nodding as she sees my pass, ignoring my coffee, which is forbidden on board.

There is the hospital; I see it through the clouded window. There is real death, not the stranger I seek behind every tree, every dog's bark. I am sure I will not return today. There isn't enough room here for the sun at one pole, the hospital at the other. Something will trip me up; something will not work, alter the plan.

If it is true that somewhere there is a book of life, then any minute now mine will be slammed shut, the page ripped out, scribbled on, recycled. How can I learn such a thing as patience, my life being made of paper?

Here is my stop. The wind curls through my hair. The bus scrapes off in a cloud of black gas. I put one foot in front of the other, the mica in the sidewalk winking at me. Maybe I should turn around, cross the street, get on another bus, get back to my apartment quick, as I did once two weeks ago. Then I wouldn't have to worry. Until tomorrow.

I keep walking, feeling like a holy man.

THE PETITION requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act. (This authority will allow the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative will be required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.) The Independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority.

A HEARING on the petition will be held on November 17, 1992 at 9:00 A.M. Room 426 in the Probate Department, Superior Court of California, City and County of San Francisco, City Hall, 400 Van Ness Ave., San Francisco, CA 94102. IF YOU OBJECT to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney. IF YOU ARE A CREDITOR or a contingent creditor of the deceased, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within four months from the date of first issuance of letters as provided in section 9100 of the California Probate Code. The time for filing claims will not expire before four months from the hearing date noticed above. YOU MAY EXAMINE the file kept by the court. Guardian has really paid off for us. We are in a remote location in Yosemite and have a difficult time targeting advertising that will work for our needs. I am thrilled with the response I've received through advertising in the Guardian. I'd recommend it highly!!"

Kay Bargmann

I've advertised weekly for a year

Week of October 29 - November 4, 1992

THE BAY GUARDIAN'S WEEKLY HOROSCOPE.
By CHARON DUNN

ARIES

(March 21 - April 19)

This week you'll be trapped in an elevator and forced to listen to Muzak for hours.
During your imprisonment, someone will steal your toy collection. When you finally escape, you'll find that your favorite fast-food purveyor has gone out of business. Boo! Did I scare you? Happy Halloween, and expect yet another typical week of mad cavorting.

TAURUS

(April 20 - May 20)

Here comes a week of stress! All your friends will move in with you! You'll go to fashionable parties every night and listen to really loud rave music! At the same time, your career will pick up and you'll be overworked, with lots of pressure! Not! Happy Halloween. If the above seemed excessively frightening, just delete the scary parts and expect a week of blissful excess.

GEMINI

(May 21 - June 20)

Your sordid past will come back to haunt you this week when your respectable friends discover a box of your old photographs. Then, instant fame will be yours when CNN does an exposé on one of your secret hobbies. Also, your phone will be disconnected. Scared yet? Happy Halloween! Watch out for people who gossip more than you do.

CANCER

(June 21 - July 22)

This week you'll be evicted, but you'll find a more interesting place to live, with several roommates who wear the same size clothes and have similar taste in music. After all, you have too many material possessions anyway. And you can always sell your TV and your rare coin collection to replace any that get stolen.
Boo! Happy Halloween! Your week isn't nearly as scary as it looks.

LEO

(July 23 - August 22)

You won't be invited to any parties at all this week, and will spend your days shopping for sensible clothes and nights alphabetizing your shoes. Your lover will leave you for an accountant, and a strange flu virus will cause all your hair to fall out.
Boo! If that didn't scare you, you're not a real Leo. Get out there and have fun!

VIRGO

(August 23 - September 22)

This week your employer will relocate to parts unknown. Then, your kitchen will explode, and you'll be forced to live on fast food until it's fixed. Finally, someone will meddle with your laundry, making huge magenta-colored streaks on all your clothes. Are you scared yet? Happy Halloween! Actually, you can expect this week to bring you pleasant disasters and comforting new insights.

LIBRA

(September 23 - October 22)

This will be a high-powered week full of split-second decisions. Much responsibility will be involved. Entire lives will depend on your ability to perform under pressure. Also, the stars indicate improvement in your neighborhood, involving extensive early morning jackhammering. Boo! Happy Halloween! Come out from under the bed and enjoy all the interesting opportunities this week provides.

SCORPIO

(October 23 - November 20)

This week, your sweetheart will leave you for an ex-Marine with seventeen pierced body parts. New scientific discoveries will make your career obsolete by next Wednesday. And your home will turn out to be built over the world's largest toxic waste dump. Boo! Happy Birthday/Halloween. A pleasantly scary week lies ahead.

Transit Engineer Surprises Incumbent

NASH MAKES RACE FOR BART BOARD DIRECTOR CLOSE

San Francisco environmentalist Andy Nash has surprised many political commentators by running a close race with incumbent BART Board director mike bernick.

Nash, the President of San Francisco Tomorrow, captured the endorsements of the leading environmental groups including the Sierra Club, the San Francisco Green Party, League of Conservation Voters and San Francisco Tomorrow.

He also received the endorsements from neighborhood democratic clubs in the Sunset, the Richmond and Bayview/Hunter's Point as well as the Arts Democratic Club.

Former mayors Art Agnos and Joseph Alioto, Sr. joined Board of Supervisors President Kevin Shelley, Supervisors Terence Hallinan and Jim Gonzalez in supporting his candidacy. Sue Bierman and Jose Medina have also endorsed Nash's run to bring San Francisco's interests to the BART Board. mike bernick, the incumbent, has been endorsed by State Senator Quentin Kopp.

Nash said, "I am proud to carry the progressive democratic banner in this BART Board race. San Francisco's interests are ignored by the present BART Board. While we need connection of CalTrain to the Transbay terminal, while over 50,000 people every day travel the Geary corridor, the incumbent cares only about extending BART in the East Bay to pick up an additional 6000 riders per day. BART doesn't even know San Francisco exists. This is clearly the failure of our present representative."

Nash concluded, "The incumbent will out-spend me in the closing days of the campaign with glossy, high-priced mailers. However, our campaign's grassroots effort will overcome that slight advantage."

The Quentin Kopp/mike bernick 'into the airport' Plan

PASSENGER TAX FOR MORE INCONVENIENT TRIP TO SFO

Quentin Kopp and mike bernick have joined together to force BART 'into the airport' at a higher cost. The Plan as proposed by them would be paid for in major part by a Passenger tax on each airline ticket out of San Francisco Airport.

In addition, this option, not preferred by transit experts, would cost anywhere from $300 to $500 million dollars more than the plan supported by Transportation engineers including Andy Nash.

Nash said, "Of course we need BART to the airport. However, the Kopp/bernick Plan doesn't make sense for San Francisco. Over 84% of the people using the system will be greatly inconvenienced by their overpriced option. The current airport plans for connecting an automated light rail transit system to BART. This will be far more convenient to the airline passenger as it will stop at every terminal every two minutes and not just one out of the way BART station."

"BART needs a director who can ask the right questions," Nash continued, "and understand the answers given by staff."

The National Women's Political Caucus gave Transit Engineer Andy Nash its highest rating in the BART Board race— "Very Good."

Under Andy NASH's leadership, SF Tomorrow, an environmental action group, endorsed and campaigned for DOMESTIC PARTNER legislation in San Francisco.

Who's paying for mike

Incumbent did nothing

BART WASTES OVER $265,000 ON MANAGEMENT MOVING EXPENSES

This summer San Francisco Chronicle reporter Harre W. Demoro broke the story about over $265,000 being expended by the General Manager and the incumbent BART Directors to pay for the moving expenses of out of state BART male executives to come to Northern California. Talented men and women from the Bay Area were overlooked.

Among some of the expenses paid was approximately $75 for the art transportation of a pet for an assistant manager who earns over $140,000 annually.

The taxpayers paid these outrageous travel & moving expenses.

The incumbent, mike bernick, stood by and DID NOTHING.

San Francisco needs a BART Director who's watching our money before it's spent.

San Francisco needs Andy Nash!

bernick's Campaign?

San Francisco Weekly exposes Bernick's Fundraising

In its October 14, 1992 edition, SF Weekly reporter Dylan Callaghan wrote in part "Official records show that vast majority of the money (that Bernick has raised) comes from more than 100 transit-related architecture, construction and engineering firms. Many of these firms have held or currently hold contracts with BART to expand transit lines, among other jobs. 'Yes I've approved contracts that have gone to engineering firms that have contributed to my campaign,' Bernick said in an interview. But he added that he's never influenced a contract decision as a result of campaign gifts.

"...Among Bernick's contributors are the Bechtel Group, Tudor Engineering and URS Consulting, all of which made donations ranging from $500 to $1,000. Each of these firms won bids for the development of the Dublin expansion at different times within the past three years.

"...Bernick's relationship with firms that do business with BART extends to his personal finances. In 1991, Bernick started National Transit Land Use Center, a nonprofit research firm associated with UC Berkeley. To partially fund the center, Bernick said he solicits donations from these firms, and in turn, draws an annual salary of $36,000 from it.

"...Asked to explain why URS Consultants, a transit-related firm, made a donation to Bernick, a senior official pointed to a similarity in viewpoints. 'We believe in good government, people who think like we do.'"
